through passion, partiality, prejudice, or corruption, new trials will be ordered.⁵⁸

(3.) Libel and Slander. — The same rule applies to libel and slander cases as to personal injury suits. The jury have a large discretion in such actions, and their verdict will not be set aside as excessive unless it appears that passion or prejudice has controlled it.⁵⁹

(IV.) Inadequate Damages. — (A.) IN GENERAL. — The early English doctrine was that a new trial would not be granted on the ground that the damages were too small,⁶⁰ or, at least, only in very exceptional cases.⁶¹ Under the modern doctrine, however, a new trial may be granted where the damages are manifestly insufficient,⁶² and it has been pertinently said that a verdict for a grossly inadequate amount

[b] The generally accepted doctrine at the present time is that the verdict of a jury is subject to the supervision of the court, whether it is too large or too small. Toledo R. & L. Co. v. Mason, 81 Ohio St. 463, 91 N. E. 292, 28 L. R. A. (N. S.) 130.

[c] "It is a power rarely exercised, and especially in actions for personal wrongs, such as slanders, batteries and the like; but where the foundation of the action is a breach of contract and the damages are capable of estimation, if there is a glaring deficiency, justice requires that the case shall be revised. . . . It is certainly within the discretion of the court, to be exercised very cautiously, and perhaps never for this cause alone, where the action is of a vindictive nature, and the damages properly arbitrary with the jury; though there may be flagrant cases even of that nature in which the court would interpose." Taunton Mfg. Co. v. Smith, 9 Pick. (Mass.) 11.

stands upon no higher ground in legal principle, nor in the rules of law or justice, than a verdict for an excessive or extravagant amount.⁶³ In fact, where the verdict is, upon the evidence, inadequate, the verdict is contrary to evidence.⁶⁴

The general rule is particularly applicable where the damages are capable of exact measurement in accordance with a prescribed standard.⁶⁵ As in the case, however, of excessive damages, where there is no standard for measuring damages, a new trial should not be granted for inadequacy of recovery unless prejudice or passion is clear,⁶⁶ or unless it is manifest that injustice has been done.⁶⁷ But where the damages awarded are manifestly or grossly inadequate, or where by reason of inadequacy injustice would be done, a new trial ought to be granted.⁶⁸ The fact, however, that only nominal damages were allowed may justify a trial court in treating the verdict as in effect one for the defendant, where the evidence would have sustained such a verdict, and in denying a new trial requested on the ground of the inadequacy of the amount.⁶⁹ So also a new trial may be denied where upon the law or the evidence the trial court is satisfied the verdict should have been for the defendant.⁷⁰

In this case the court further says: "It is doubtless true that instances of the former occur less frequently, because it is less frequently possible to make it clearly appear that the jury have grossly erred. But where the case does plainly show such a result, justice as plainly forbids that the plaintiff should be denied what is his due, as that the defendant should pay what he ought not to be charged." Under Statutes. — The right to a new trial for inadequate damages is sometimes regulated by statute.⁷¹ Thus it is sometimes provided that a new trial shall not be granted on account of the smallness of damages in an action for an injury to the person or reputation.⁷² Such a statute does not apply to special damages capable of accurate measurement by a definite rule of law.⁷³

Right of Defendant To Complain. — A new trial will not be granted, however, upon the application of a defendant on the ground that the amount found for the plaintiff was too small, even where plaintiff, if entitled to recover anything was admittedly entitled to more than the verdict gave him, one cannot take advantage of an error favorable to himself.⁷⁴

Punitive Damages. — It has been held that a new trial cannot be allowed on the ground that the punitive damages allowed were too small.⁷⁵

(B.) CONTRACTS. — Even in the earlier cases, it was held that the rule that verdicts would not be set aside on account of their smallness did not apply to contracts,⁷⁶ since in actions upon breach of contract, the injury done can be estimated by fixed standards of value,⁷⁷ and it is well established that where in contract actions, the verdict is glaringly deficient, a new trial will be awarded.⁷⁸

(C.) PROPERTY AND PROPERTY RIGHTS. — The rule as to contracts applies generally to actions relating to injuries to property and property rights. In such cases, the damages are usually subject to rules of measurement, and where there are substantial inadequacies in the amounts recovered, new trials are proper remedies.⁷⁹

(D.) PERSONAL INJURIES. — It was especially in connection with tort actions, and particularly in the case of personal injuries and defamation, that the early common law rule, which refused to grant new trials, on the ground of the verdict being too small, applied.⁸⁰ The rule, however, has been relaxed, and it is now held both in England and in the United States that it is the duty of the court to grant, in such cases, a new trial where the verdict is so grossly inadequate as to suggest it must have been rendered under the influence of passion or prejudice, or by some misconception of the law or evidence.⁸¹ This rule applies not only where the verdict was for merely nominal damages,⁸² unless the court regards such a verdict as, in effect, one for the defendant,⁸³ but also where it did not amount to substantial compensation for the injuries received.⁸⁴ The exercise by the trial court,

[a] The jury cannot base their finding on chance or prejudice, or arbitrarily disregard the elements of damage as defined and limited by the court. Where it is apparent that a plaintiff has suffered injuries proximately caused by the defendant's negligence which entitles him to substantial damages, the jury must award him substantial damages. Doody v. Boston & M. R. R., 77 N. H. 161, 89 Atl. 487, Ann. Cas. 1914C, 846.

[a] Inadequate Verdicts.—In Mariani v. Dougherty, 46 Cal. 26, a verdict for $200 was set aside for this reason; in Bennett v. Hobro, 72 Cal. 178, 13 Pac. 473, the same result was reached upon a similar verdict; in Clark v. New York, N. H. & H. R. Co., 33 R. I. 83, 102, 80 Atl. 406, Ann. Cas. 1913B, 356, it was held that $2,000 might be deemed inadequate for injuries inflicted; and in Phillips v. London & Southwestern Ry. Co., 4 Q. B. D. (Eng.) 406, 5 Q. B. D. 78, 7,000 pounds was regarded as too small an amount. At a second trial the verdict was for 16,000 pounds, which was sustained. Phillips v. London & S. W. Ry. Co., 5 Com. Pl. Div. 280.

[b] "The only rational rule upon this subject is that when the verdict in a personal injury case is so small, in view of the uncontroverted facts of the case disclosing the extent of the injury that the court can clearly see that the jury have not performed their

of its discretion in granting a new trial for inadequate damages, will not be interfered with on appeal, in the absence of abuse.⁸⁵ A new trial will not be granted, however, merely because the court thinks the amount is less than it ought to have been.⁸⁶

(E.) LIBEL AND SLANDER. — In libel and slander cases, a new trial will not be given for inadequacy of recovery except in rare instances. In such cases, damages are seldom subject to any fixed standard of computation.⁸⁷ Where, however, the damages are so grossly inadequate as to raise a presumption of passion or prejudice, a new trial may properly be awarded.⁸⁸ entertained with great reluctance,⁹³ one that will be critically examined by the court,⁹⁴ and one for which new trials will be granted rarely and with great caution.⁹⁵ The movant must make a clear and strong case,⁹⁶ and it must appear that injustice was done by the verdict.⁹⁷ Moreover, as in the case of other grounds, a motion for a new trial on the ground of newly discovered evidence is addressed largely to the discretion of the court.⁹⁸

(F.) ASSAULT AND BATTERY. — While it is the general rule, in actions for assault and battery, that a new trial will not be granted save in extreme cases, yet where the verdict is grossly inadequate the courts will, usually, not permit it to stand.⁸⁹

H. NEWLY DISCOVERED EVIDENCE. — 1. In General. — Newly discovered evidence is recognized generally as a sufficient ground for new trial, both in civil⁹⁰ and criminal cases.⁹¹ Despite the many cases connected with this cause for new trial, judicial utterance declares it to be a ground looked upon by the courts with distrust and disfavor,⁹²

2. Basic Requisites.—New trials upon the ground of newly discovered evidence are granted only under the following restrictions: (1) The evidence must have been discovered since the former trial; (2) the party must have used diligence to procure it on the former trial; (3) it must be material to the issue; (4) it must go to the merits of the cause, and not merely to impeach the character of a witness; (5) it must not be merely cumulative; (6) it must be such as ought to produce on another trial an opposite result on the merits.⁹⁹

[a] Distrust and Disfavor.—"Applications for this cause," says the court, in Baker v. Joseph, 16 Cal. 173, "are regarded with distrust and disfavor. The temptations are so strong to make a favorable showing, after a defeat in an angry and bitter controversy involving considerable interests and the circumstances that testimony has just been discovered, when it is too late to introduce it, so suspicious, that courts require the very strictest showing to be made of diligence and all other facts necessary to give effect to the claim."

3. Nature or Character of New Evidence. — a. Must Be Material. The alleged newly discovered evidence must be material,¹ and it must be so material and important that it will probably produce a different verdict.² Newly discovered evidence of a general character, and relating wholly to an immaterial issue,³ or which tends merely to mitigate damages,⁴ is not sufficient. In a criminal case evidence tending to show commission of the crime by another person may be material and important;⁵ but the opinion of non-experts as to the sanity of the

[a] The court will, however, consider the character of the alleged newly discovered evidence, also the circumstances under which the affidavit as to the alleged new evidence was made, and will refuse the motion for a new trial if the evidence is (1) improbable (People v. Poole, 127 App. Div. 122, 111 N. Y. Supp. 258), (2) too indefinite (Alexander v. State, 49 Tex. Crim. 93, 90 S. W. 1112), or (3) the circumstances of the affidavit too suspicious. Smith v. People, 39 Colo. 202, 88 Pac. 1072, where the affidavit confessing to the sole commission of the crime was made at a point (El Paso, Tex.) suspiciously near the boundary of the United States.

[b] Another Person Indicted.—The mere fact, however, that subsequently to the conviction of the accused another person has been indicted for the murder of the same person, is not ground for a new trial. Jones v. State, 135 Ga. 357, 69 S. E. 527.

[c] Affidavit of Co-Defendant.—The accused, without the facts upon which the opinion is based, is not.⁶

b. Must Be Relevant.—The newly discovered evidence must also be relevant to the issue.⁷ Evidence based upon matters not embraced within the issues,⁸ or inconsistent with the evidence adduced on the former trial,⁹ cannot be considered.

affidavit of a co-defendant, serving a sentence in jail, that he alone committed the crime, and that his co-defendant, now moving for a new trial, had nothing to do with the crime, is held insufficient for a new trial. Biard v. State (Tex. Crim.), 100 S. W. 937.

f. Cumulative Evidence.—(I.) In General.—If the newly discovered evidence be merely cumulative, a new trial will be denied.²⁰ In this general rule, the use of the term “merely” is important, and the statement often met with, namely, that a new trial will not be granted if the evidence is cumulative, requires, in most jurisdictions, some modification. For, although it has been said that the rule will be relaxed with great caution,²¹ and that cumulative evidence even though

[a] To Establish an Alibi.—In State v. Stowe, 3 Wash. 206, 28 Pac. 337, 14 L. R. A. 609, the court said: "It is urged that the newly discovered testimony is cumulative and therefore not sufficient to command a new trial; but this rule governing cumulative evidence must be received with some modification, and given a common sense construction, and, whatever may be its application to other character of testimony, we do not think it applies where the object of the evidence is to prove an alibi. In Pinckford v. State, 13 Tex. App. 468, the court says: 'That evidence is cumulative, where the object sought is to prove an alibi, is no reason for its exclusion; on the contrary, the greater the number of witnesses to the facts establishing it, the stronger, ordinarily, would be our reliance upon and conviction of its truth.' The same doctrine was laid down in Smythe v. State, 17 Tex. App. 244; also Lawson v. State, 13 Tex. App. 264; Tyler v. State, 13 Tex. App. 205."

fact.³⁷ Newly discovered evidence as to relevant facts concerning which no proof was offered at all,³⁸ such as declarations or admissions of a party inconsistent with the case made by him,³⁹ or admissions or declarations of a prosecuting witness, when offered and admissible in behalf of the defendant,⁴⁰ or, in a prosecution for homicide, evidence of threats of the deceased,⁴¹ or evidence in contradiction of testimony which was wholly on one side, at the trial,⁴² or as to which the only evidence favorable to the moving party was that brought out on cross-examination of the adverse party's witnesses,⁴³ is not cumulative.

*Where the evidence on the trial is wholly circumstantial, and the evidence newly discovered is positive and direct, it should not be adjudged cumulative.⁴⁴ Nor, is circumstantial evidence cumulative of direct evidence to establish the same fact.⁴⁵

Newly discovered opinion evidence is not ground, usually, for a new trial since such evidence may cumulate to an infinite degree,⁴⁶ although

[a] Illustration.—In an action for damages from a flood, alleged to have been caused by the breaking of a dam, witnesses for the defendants testified that they saw the dam still standing after the time when the injury was done. The plaintiff produced no evidence to the contrary, but asked a new trial on the ground that he had subsequently discovered eye witnesses who could contradict this testimony. It was held that the new evidence was not cumulative, and was of such importance that its effect should be passed upon by the jury, and that the diligence shown by the plaintiff was sufficient to entitle him to a new trial. *Davis v. direct evidence is not cumulative to opinion evidence.⁴⁷

In criminal cases the rules are generally the same as in civil cases,⁴⁸ though it has been said that in a criminal case a new trial should be granted for newly discovered cumulative evidence which would raise a reasonable doubt of defendant's guilt.⁴⁹

g. Credibility of Evidence.—The proposed new evidence must be credible.⁵⁰ Upon the hearing, the witnesses by whom the newly discovered evidence is to be proved may be impeached,⁵¹ and if it appears that the nature of the new evidence, or the character of the proposed witnesses, be such as to make the alleged new evidence improbable or untrustworthy, a new trial will not be granted.⁵²

h. Must Affect Result.—Lastly, the newly discovered evidence must be such that, if a new trial were granted on its account, the result would probably be changed.⁵³ While there has been, and is, some fluctuation of judicial expression as to the requisite weight of the new evidence, such, for example, as “if it appears that it may change the verdict;”⁵⁴ “so decisive that it will produce an opposite result;”⁵⁵ “plainest proof of its sufficiency to lead to a different result;”⁵⁶ “must with considerable certainty control the verdict;”⁵⁷ “must be conclusive;”⁵⁸ “reasonably certain to bring about a different result;”⁵⁹ “calculated to produce a substantial change in the verdict;”⁶⁰ “must preponderate greatly;”⁶¹ and, “clearly appears that it would change the result,”⁶² yet the great majority of cases base the sufficiency upon a probable change in the result.⁶³

if known to counsel, and not introduced,⁷² it cannot be considered newly discovered evidence. It is no excuse that the party did not know the evidence was material,⁷³ or that it was deemed unnecessary,⁷⁴ or that it was supposed, if the evidence were presented, the witness would prove hostile,⁷⁵ or would claim his privilege although now willing to waive it,⁷⁶ or that an incompetent witness has subsequently become competent,⁷⁷ except, perhaps, in a criminal case.⁷⁸ It may, however, be a sufficient excuse for not producing evidence known to exist, that it was concealed until after trial, without fault of the movant.⁷⁹

b. Facts Transpiring Since Trial.—It has been held that newly discovered evidence means evidence in existence at the time of the trial, but which could not, by reasonable diligence have been procured in time for the trial,⁸⁰ and, consequently, that facts transpiring since the verdict are not sufficient for a new trial on the ground of newly discovered evidence.⁸¹ There is, however, authority to con-

[a] Thus, in an action for an injunction for the removal of obstructions placed in a natural water course, a new trial was sought on evidence that after the trial heavy rains had caused an overflow on plaintiff's land on account of the objectionable obstructions. [a] Physical Condition Revealed After Trial.—In an action for personal injuries brought by a young married woman, the expert evidence tended to show that certain surgical operations, rendered necessary by the accident, made it impossible that she should ever bear children. After a verdict and judgment in her favor for $7,000, a new trial was sought on the ground that she had since given birth to a child. In holding that a new trial should have been granted on the discovery of this fact, the court said that, from the very nature of the case, it was impossible for the defendant to have contradicted the evidence that the accident and succeeding operation had made it impossible for her to bear children. Anshutz v. Louisville Ry. Co., 152 Ky. 741, 154 S. W. 13, 45 L. R. A. (N. S.) 87. See also Mason v. Meloan, 165 Ky. 582, 177 S. W. 435.

[b] Defective Construction Revealed After Trial.—In an action for the contract price of a concrete wall across the mouth of defendant's cove, evidence of the defective construction of the wall, revealed by time and tide after trial, was held newly discovered evidence, existing at the time of trial, and supporting motion for a new trial. It was argued that this evidence did not exist at the time of the trial, but it was held that the testimony showed that it did exist but could not at that time be seen. Giles v. Robinson, 114 Me. 552, 96 Atl. 745.

83. See infra, this note.

[a] Evidence Temporarily Concealed. Thus, in an action for damages by fire to a sugar tree farm, it was material to have a plan made of the farm as a matter of evidence showing the injury. A heavy fall of snow prevented, however, any examination of the place, and the snow remained on the ground until after the term in which the case was tried. Defendant who desired this evidence moved for a continuance which was denied. It was held that a petition for a new trial for newly discovered evidence was within the spirit of the rule, and a new trial was granted. Kilby v. Erwin, 84 Vt. 266, 78 Atl. 1021.

[a] Must Affect Result.—Where in the absence of the original evidence, secondary evidence has been introduced, the later discovery of the original evidence will not be a ground for a new trial unless it appears that the introduction of it would affect the result. b. What Constitutes Diligence.—The diligence required to procure and produce evidence is usually specified to be a reasonable diligence, or sometimes described as due diligence, proper diligence, or active diligence. From the very nature of the requirement, no specific rule can be laid down as to what constitutes diligence, since it must necessarily depend upon the circumstances of each case. There are general principles, however, which can be applied to all cases. Thus, it is the duty of a party or his counsel to make every reasonable search for witnesses in the preparation of his case,⁹³ and due inquiry should possible diligence has been used and no record found, owing to circumstances or accidents involving no negligence or fault on the movant's part, a new trial should be granted.¹⁸

d. Former Witnesses.—As a rule, newly discovered evidence cannot be presented by means of witnesses who testified at the original trial,¹⁹ and a very strong case must be made out to justify a new trial by the additional testimony of such witnesses.²⁰ Evidence, moreover, cannot be said to be newly discovered which could have been elicited by cross-examination, since due diligence should have suggested the proper inquiry at the trial.²¹ That a witness when testifying forgot to state alleged important matters is not evidence which reasonable diligence could not have produced at the trial,²² and, especially, where a new trial is asked because a witness was not questioned on certain points.²³ A verdict obtained through the mistaken testimony of a witness has been set aside on the ground of newly discovered evidence where the mistake was discovered after the trial,²⁴ but that a witness committed perjury and will admit it on a new trial is held, in a civil case, not ground for a new trial,²⁵ although in criminal cases where the defendant was convicted by perjured testimony, the discovery of such perjury after the trial is held a sufficient cause for a new trial on the ground of newly discovered evidence.²⁶

III. PROCEDURE TO OBTAIN NEW TRIAL. — A. METHOD.

1. In General.—In most jurisdictions, at the present time, applications for new trials are made either by motion or by petition. The details of procedure vary in the different states, and are often governed by local statutes.²⁷ The method provided by the statute must be followed.²⁸

2. Rule Nisi, or Rule To Show Cause.—Under the former common law practice in England, when the prevailing party moved for judgment, the court entered a rule that judgment would be entered within four days, unless ("nisi"), meanwhile, cause to the contrary should be shown. This was known as "judgment nisi," or "the rule nisi."²⁹ This gave rise to the further rule that a motion for a new trial must be made within this time, namely, four days,³⁰ otherwise, judgment would be entered.³¹ A party desiring a new trial would thereupon apply to the court for a rule that the prevailing party should show cause why a new trial should not be granted. This was known as "the rule to show cause," or also, as before, "the rule nisi."³² Upon the hearing, after proper notice, the rule was made "absolute" or was "discharged," according as the new trial was granted or denied.³³ By strict common law procedure, a rule to show cause may be appropriate at the present time,³⁴ and, in some jurisdictions, the practice seems to be still followed.³⁵

3. Motion.—In most jurisdictions, at the present time, an application for a new trial, in most cases, is made by motion.³⁶

4. Petition.—In a few states, the proper form of application is by petition.³⁷

5. Motion and Petition.—In many states, the statutes provide for both motions and petitions; a motion being the usual method employed when the application is made during the term the verdict, report, or decision is rendered, and a petition being the designated method when the grounds for a new trial could not with reasonable diligence have been discovered before, but are discovered after the term at which the verdict, report, or decision was rendered.³⁸

6. Bill in Equity.—In some jurisdictions, after the time has expired in which a motion for a new trial may be made in a court of law, a bill in equity may be filed to vacate the judgment and to obtain a new trial.³⁹

B. WHO MAY APPLY.—1. Party to the Action.—As a rule, only a party to the action can move for a new trial.⁴⁰

2. Aggrieved Party.—The applicant, moreover, must be "an aggrieved party," this term being frequently used in the statutes designating those who may apply for a new trial.⁴¹ However, both parties

7. Court's Own Motion.—At common law, new trials may be granted by courts of general jurisdiction upon their own motion.⁴⁹ In some jurisdictions this rule applies to criminal as well as to civil cases.⁵⁰ Moreover, according to some authorities, the power may be exercised notwithstanding the statutes merely provide that new trials may be granted on the motion of an aggrieved party,⁵¹ and may be exercised regardless of the pendency of such a motion by a party,⁵² and for reasons not stated in such a pending motion.⁵³ In fact, where the trial court is of the opinion that, for any legal reason, the trial was not fair, and that injustice has been done, it may, in its discretion, set aside the verdict and award a new trial.⁵⁴ In some states, however, it is held that the statutory method of application by a party is impliedly exclusive, and that a court is without power to grant a new trial upon its own motion.⁵⁵ Furthermore, the court's power in this respect is sometimes expressly limited by statute, to a plain case of disregard of the evidence or instructions.⁵⁶ According to some authorities this power may be exercised at any time during the term in which the verdict was rendered, but not after;⁵⁷ other cases, however, apparently limit the power to the time in which a party could make the motion.⁵⁸

tribunal, or judge, an application for a new trial should be made, is a matter of practice that varies in the different jurisdictions, and has varied, from time to time, in the same jurisdiction.⁵⁹ New trial by special legislative act has been allowed.⁶⁰ Under some circumstances application is made to a court of equity.⁶¹

2. Trial Court or Judge.—Unless the statute provides otherwise,⁶² the motion for new trial must be made in the court in which trial took place.⁶³ Ordinarily the motion is made to the judge who tried the case,⁶⁴ including a judge acting pro tempore,⁶⁵ and also a special judge appointed, by provision of statute, to try a cause.⁶⁶ But such a motion is no part of the original trial, and it is not generally essential that the judge who tried the case should entertain the motion.⁶⁷ Accordingly, at common law, the application may be made to another judge of the same court, at the same term,⁶⁸ unless the statute otherwise

D. TIME FOR MAKING APPLICATION.—1. Generally.—Under the English practice, judgment was regularly entered four days after the entry of a rule for judgment, and, ordinarily, motions for a new trial had to be made within that four day period.⁷⁸ But in the United States, generally, the time depends either upon rules of court,⁷⁹ or, usually, upon the provisions of the statutes.⁸⁰ In absence of statute

Sometimes, the statutes permit a motion to be made at any time during the term,⁸² or before some specified stage in the proceedings.⁸³ More frequently, however, they specify a definite number of days after the verdict, decision, or trial.⁸⁴

2. Premature Motions.—A premature motion is unavailing.⁸⁵ Thus, a motion is premature, and of no avail, if made before a ver-

3. During the Term.—In many jurisdictions, either by the common law rule, or express provision of statute, a motion for a new trial, except in certain cases, such as surprise, or newly discovered evidence, can be made only during the term in which the verdict or decision is rendered.⁸⁸ If made during vacation, the motion will be too late.⁸⁹ In other jurisdictions, however, either by force of statute, or judicial decision, the motion may be filed after the term.⁹⁰

4. With Respect to Other Proceedings.—a. Generally.—The proper time for making a motion for a new trial, so far as other motions relating to the verdict are concerned, has been previously considered.⁹¹ Attention, however, is here called to the rule that a motion made in arrest of judgment constitutes, in some jurisdictions, a waiver of a motion for a new trial,⁹² as does the taking of an appeal.⁹³

b. Entry of Judgment.—At common law, judgment was not entered, or signed, until the motions directed to the verdict had been heard and determined.⁹⁴ This practice is the basis of the rule that a motion for a new trial must be made before entry of judgment.⁹⁵ This rule is not observed, however, in the practice of many jurisdictions⁹⁶ and, in some has been rendered inoperative by statutes,⁹⁷ as where they provide that the motion may be made after entry of judgment.⁹⁸

5. As Affected by Basis or Grounds of Motion.—The time within which the motion may be made may, also, depend upon the alleged grounds for the new trial. For example, the statute may provide that for an "extraordinary" ground the motion may be made after the term.⁹⁹ In the case of newly discovered evidence, the discovery may not be made until after the entry of judgment, or after the end of the term, consequently for such cause a longer time is usually allowed for the application.¹

Minutes of the Court.—In some jurisdictions, motions made upon the minutes of the court must be made during the term in which the trial was held,² or within the time specially provided by the statute.³

time for making motions for new trials in criminal cases, different from that provided for civil cases.

7. Particular Courts.—a. Inferior Courts.—The time fixed by statute for seeking a new trial in inferior courts is sometimes different from that in superior courts.⁵

b. Federal Courts.—In the federal courts, the motion may be filed during the term at which the verdict was rendered,⁶ but not after the term at which final judgment was entered.⁷ The federal statute providing that the practice and modes of proceeding in civil causes shall conform "as near as may be" to the practice existing in the state courts,⁸ does not require conformity to the state practice in respect to the time for making motions for new trials.⁹

c. Courts of Equity.—The time for applying for a rehearing in equity,¹⁰ and for seeking relief in equity from a judgment at law,¹¹ are elsewhere treated.

8. When Granted of Court's Own Motion.—The time within which the court may of its own motion grant a new trial is elsewhere discussed.¹²

[a] Rules of Court.—(1) The time in which motions for new trials may be made in the federal courts is regulated somewhat by the rules of court, and they vary in the different districts. See Hastings v. Northern Pac. R. Co., 53 Fed. 224; Henning v. Western Union Tel. Co., 41 Fed. 864. (2) Rule 5 of the Southern District of New York extends the term for the purpose of such motions until three calendar months, beginning on the first Tuesday of the month in which the verdict is rendered or judgment entered. Under this rule it has been held that the time runs from the month in which judgment was entered, regardless of the words "verdict is rendered."

court over the proceedings has terminated by reason of the end of the term at which judgment was entered, it cannot be revived thereafter by consent of the parties.³⁴

11. Necessity of Observing and Waiver.—An application for a new trial must be made within the time allowed by law,³⁵ unless this period has been lawfully extended,³⁶ and if not so made the application will be useless, either for the purpose of obtaining a new trial,³⁷ or as a prerequisite to appellate review.³⁸ It is too late, however, to object on this ground for the first time, after a new trial has been granted.³⁹

The effect of a motion in arrest or an appeal as a waiver of new trial, is elsewhere treated.⁴⁰

12. Bill in Equity.—In some jurisdictions, after the judgment, or after the time has expired in which a motion for a new trial may be regularly made, a bill in equity may be filed, in certain cases, to vacate the judgment and to obtain a new trial.⁴¹ The usual grounds for such a bill are unavoidable casualty or misfortune,⁴² or where a judgment was obtained through accident, mistake, or fraud,⁴³ or newly discovered evidence.⁴⁴ The plaintiff in such a petition must, however, be without fault,⁴⁵ free from negligence in making his defense in the action at law,⁴⁶ or in striving to obtain testimony,⁴⁷ and guiltless of laches in filing his application.⁴⁸

E. PRACTICE IN CONNECTION WITH APPLICATION.—1. Notice of Intention.—a. Requirement.—In some jurisdictions, the adverse party must be served with a notice of the intention of the aggrieved party to move for a new trial.⁴⁹ A failure to serve all adverse parties with such notice will deprive an aggrieved party of his right to be heard.⁵⁰

b. Form of Notice.—When the adverse party is in court, the notice may usually be given orally, or, as said, "in open court."⁵¹ Otherwise, the notice should be in writing.⁵² It should contain everything which the statute requires,⁵³ and should clearly indicate the purpose to ask for a new trial,⁵⁴ though this need not be stated in express terms.⁵⁵

Cudden v. Wheeler & Wilson Mfg. Co., 23 R. I. 528, 51 Atl. 48.

49. See the statutes and the following: Cal.—Bell v. San Francisco Sav. Union, 153 Cal. 64, 94 Pac. 225. Mont. Cummings v. Reins Copper Co., 40 Mont. 599, 107 Pac. 904. S. D.—Traxinger v. Minneapolis, St., etc. R. Co., 23 S. D. 90, 120 N. W. 770; Mac Gregor v. Pierce, 17 S. D. 51, 95 N. W. 281. Utah.—East v. Mooney, 7 Utah 414, 27 Pac. 4. Wash.—Boarman v. Hinkley, 17 Wash. 126, 49 Pac. 226.

[a] The adverse party (1) upon whom the notice is to be served is determined by the same rule as is the "adverse party" upon whom a notice of appeal is to be served, namely, every party whose interest in the subject-matter of the motion is adverse to, or will be affected by, the granting of the motion or changing the former decision. Sprague v. Walton, 145 Cal. 228, 78 Pac. 645; United States v. Crooks, 116 Cal. 43, 47 Pac. 870. (2) Such a party may include a co-party of the applicant who does not join in the application for the new trial. United States v. Crooks, supra; Clark v. Austin, 38 Minn. 487, 38 N. W. 615.

[b] "Extraordinary Case."—Where, under the local practice, an application for a new trial may be made, out of the usual time, in unusual or "extraordinary cases," due notice of such an application may be required to be served upon the adverse party. See Cleveland v. Chambliss, 64 Ga. 353, containing a form of notice.

50. United States v. Crooks, 116 Cal. 43, 47 Pac. 870; Herriman v. Menzies, 115 Cal. 16, 44 Pac. 660, 46 Pac. 730, 56 Am. St. Rep. 82, 35 L. R. A. 318.

[a] Served Upon All Adverse Parties.—A notice of intention to move for a new trial must be served upon every party whose interest in the subject-matter of the motion is adverse to, or will be affected by, the granting of the motion, or by changing the former decision of the court. Herriman v. Menzies, 115 Cal. 16, 44 Pac. 660, 46 Pac. 730, 56 Am. St. Rep. 82, 35 L. R. A. 318.

[b] New Trial to Part of the Parties.—The notice need be served only upon those parties against whom the new trial is granted where they are less than all of the original parties. Adams v. Stewart County Bank, 94 Ga. 718, 20 S. E. 356.

51. Killip v. Empire Mill Co., 2 Nev. 34. See Bear River, etc. Min. Co. v. Boles, 24 Cal. 354.

52. Mallory v. See, 129 Cal. 356, 61 Pac. 1123; Flateau v. Lubeck, 24 Cal. 364; Killip v. Empire Mill Co., 2 Nev. 34.

[a] Signature.—The notice should be signed either by the movant or by his attorney of record. McMahon v. Thomas, 114 Cal. 588, 46 Pac. 732.

53. See the statutes.

54. O'Connell v. Main & Tenth Sts. Hotel Co., 90 Cal. 515, 27 Pac. 373.

55. O'Connell v. Main & Tenth Sts. Hotel Co., 90 Cal. 515, 27 Pac. 373; Bauder v. Tyrrel, 59 Cal. 99.

[a] Notice of intention to move to set aside the decision and judgment sufficiently shows the purpose to ask for a new trial, where the stated grounds and basis of the motion are such that under the statutes, the motion to set aside the decision could only be intended to secure a new trial. O'Connell v. Main & Tenth Sts. Hotel Co., 90 Cal. 515, 27 Pac. 373.

[b] A notice making no reference to the verdict or decision, but merely stating that the court would be moved to set aside the "judgment" is held insufficient, since the motion should be addressed to the verdict, or the decision, rather than to the judgment.

c. Time.—The notice must be filed and served within the time required by the statute,⁵⁶ and failure to observe these requirements will waive the right to move for a new trial,⁵⁷ unless the time has been extended, where that is permissible,⁵⁸ or there has been a waiver,⁵⁹ as by the appearance of the opposite party at the hearing of the motion, without objecting to want of notice.⁶⁰

d. Designation of Grounds.—The notice of intention must designate the grounds upon which the motion for the new trial will be made,⁶¹ and failure to comply with this requirement will make the notice insufficient.⁶² The grounds should be stated clearly so that due attention may be called to the same,⁶³ and the language of the statute

[a] Under the former practice, (1) in California, the time for filing and serving the notice could be extended by the court (Burton v. Code, §659, 1916) the time cannot be extended either by order or stipulation.

[a] When the notice of intention contains such specifications of certain rulings of the court, in excluding and striking out evidence, as are sufficient to call the attention of the trial court to the particular errors relied on, and which present substantially all the

may be sufficient.⁶⁴ When the motion is to be made upon a statement of the case,⁶⁵ a general allegation of errors of law is sufficient, since the statutes require the statement to specify the particular errors upon which the party will rely.⁶⁶ When, however, the motion is to be made upon the minutes of the court, a mere statement that the evidence is insufficient to justify the verdict is too vague; the particulars of the alleged insufficiency must be set forth.⁶⁷

c. Designating Evidence or Record Relied on.—The statutes usually require the notice to specify whether the motion is to be based upon affidavits or the minutes of the court, or under some statutes, on a statement of the case or a bill of exceptions.⁶⁸

2. Requisites of Motions.—a. Form.—In most jurisdictions, either by requirement of statute or rule of court, a motion for a new trial must be in writing, the practice in civil and criminal cases not always being the same, however.⁶⁹ And, although a fixed form of questions discussed, the specification is sufficient. Reagan v. McKibben, 11 S. D. 270, 76 N. W. 943.

[b] Treated as a "Statement." Where the notice states that the motion will be made upon a "statement," and the record of the proceedings is settled by the judge as a "bill of exceptions," such record may, nevertheless, be treated as a "statement." Northwestern Redwood Co. v. Dicken, 13 Cal. App. 689, 110 Pac. 591.

[a] Filing Implies Writing.—In Osborne v. Ehrhard, 37 Kan. 413, 15 Pac. 590, it is held that a recitation in a record that "thereupon the defendant filed his motion for a new trial as motion is seldom, if ever, required, yet written motions should be carefully prepared with due regard to the rules of pleading.⁷⁰

Defects as to mere matter of form, however, will not, as a rule, render a motion invalid.⁷¹ However, unless otherwise required by statute or rule of court, the motion may be made orally,⁷² and, in some states, particularly in criminal cases, where the statutes do not require a written motion, it is the practice to make the motion orally, filing written grounds of the motion with the clerk.⁷³

b. Designation of Grounds.—(I.) In General.—In most jurisdictions, by requirement of statute or rule of court, the motion must designate the grounds for new trial relied upon by the applicant.⁷⁴ follows," which is followed by a full and formal motion including the style of the case in which it was filed, the grounds upon which it was based, and purporting to be signed by counsel, fairly implies that the motion was in writing. See further, Salinas v. Wright, 11 Tex. 572.

This requirement is analogous to the practice of assigning errors in proceedings upon appeal.⁷⁵ The ground assigned must be a ground recognized by law,⁷⁶ and all the grounds depended upon should be included in the motion.⁷⁷ A moving party is restricted to the grounds assigned,⁷⁸ since grounds not assigned will be considered waived.⁷⁹ A new trial will be granted, however, if any of the grounds alleged prove sufficient.⁸⁰

or statement of the case which is filed in support of the motion.⁸²

(III.) Sufficiency of Statement.—As a rule, the grounds should be stated clearly, so that the attention of the court, and of the opposite party, will be directed to them, and they may be informed with reasonable certainty of the points upon which the movant relies.⁸³ In some cases,⁸⁴ and, in some jurisdictions, in all cases,⁸⁵ the language of the statute may be sufficient, and a substantial compliance may be all that is required, the exact language of the statute being unnecessary. The latter rule is especially applicable where the statement of the case is required to specify particularly the specific matters relied on.⁸⁶

(IV.) Particular Grounds.—(A.) IRREGULARITIES IN THE PROCEEDINGS. It is too indefinite to allege merely that a new trial is asked for on the ground of irregularities in the proceedings; the particular irregularity or irregularities should be pointed out.⁸⁷

(B.) MISCONDUCT.—When misconduct is relied upon, the particular misconduct complained of must be specified in the motion.⁸⁸

A different rule obtains in some of the states." Spadra-Clarksville Coal Co. v. Nicholson, 93 Kan. 638, 643, 145 Pac. 571, Ann. Cas. 1916D, 652.

(C.) ERRORS OF LAW.—(1.) In General.—It is a general rule that the motion must contain a specification of the alleged errors. A motion based upon a general allegation of “errors of law occurring at the trial” is too broad, and carries with it no specific information.⁸⁹ However, in some jurisdictions, it is sufficient to follow the language of the statute, “errors of law occurring at the trial and excepted to.”⁹⁰ In all cases, moreover, of assignments of errors it should appear that due exception was taken to each and every alleged error,⁹¹ and where two or more rulings are assigned jointly as errors, the motion will be denied unless all the rulings thus assigned are erroneous.⁹²

(2.) Admission or Rejection of Evidence.—An allegation that the court erred in admitting or excluding evidence is not sufficient, in most jurisdictions, since the particular evidence alleged to have been erroneously received or rejected must be pointed out.⁹³ In some jurisory v. Schoenell, 55 Ind. 101. Me. Lennox v. Knox, etc. Co., 62 Me. 322. Wis.—Newton v. Whitney, 77 Wis. 515, 46 N. W. 882.

[a] They should be set forth with sufficient certainty, so that a person of good understanding may know what is meant. Louisville & N. R. Co. v. McCoy, 81 Ky. 403.

[b] But it is sufficient to describe the error as one “in rejecting competent testimony” or “in admitting incompetent testimony” or in “giving” or “refusing” instructions, since the exceptions taken to these matters sufficiently indicate the errors referred to. Meaux v. Meaux, 81 Ky. 475, 479. But see Dawson v. Baum, 3 Wash. Ter. 464, 19 Pac. 46, holding insufficient a general statement that the court erred in instructions to the jury, or in admitting evidence and the like.

where an assignment in the language of the statute is sufficient,⁹⁹ or the assignment may be supplemented by the specification in the statement of the case or bill of exceptions,¹ a general assignment would seem to be sufficient. But it has been held that an allegation that a series or a group of instructions is erroneous, is not sufficient unless, in fact, all are erroneous.²

(D.) VERDICT OR JUDGMENT CONTRARY TO LAW. — A statement that the verdict is against law, or contrary to law, is too general, and should be disregarded by the court. There should be a specification in what way it is against law,³ so as to call the attention of the court to the point relied upon by the applicant.⁴ An assignment in the motion that the "judgment" is contrary to law presents no question, since it does not state any recognized cause for a new trial.⁵ Moreover, a specification that the verdict is contrary to the charge of the court is insufficient.⁶

(E.) CONTRARY TO EVIDENCE. — (1.) In General. — Where the ground for the new trial is that the verdict is contrary to the evidence, or is not supported by the evidence, a mere statement to that effect does not, according to the prevailing rule, satisfy the requirement; because the motion must specify the particular reasons why the verdict is alleged to be contrary to the evidence, or the particulars in which the evidence is insufficient.⁷ However, it has been held, in a few cases, that an assignment "that the verdict is contrary to the evidence,"⁸ and, also, that the verdict "is not sustained by the evidence,"⁹ is a sufficient designation of the grounds, by virtue of the fact that such statements follow, or substantially follow, the language of the statute, authorizing a new trial for such cause.

[a] In Nebraska, the statute provides in both civil and criminal cases that it shall be sufficient to assign the grounds "in the language of the statute and without further or other particularity" (Neb. Rev. St., 1913, §§7885, 9133), and errors in instructions are not mentioned in the statute but are apparently covered only by the general ground "errors of law occurring at the trial." Nevertheless it is held that if any of the instructions given are correct, the erroneous instructions will not be considered unless specifically assigned in the motion. Fletcher v. Brewer, 88 Neb. 196, 129 N. W. 288; Phoenix Ins. Co. v. King, 52 Neb. 562, 72 N. W. 855; Thompson v. State, 44 Neb. 366, 62 N. W. 1060.

(2.) Excessive or Inadequate Damages. — If the motion is based upon the amount of recovery, the general rule is that such fact must be clearly alleged,¹⁰ as, for example, that there was error in the assessment of the amount,¹¹ or that the damages are excessive.¹² But, though the general rule is to the contrary,¹³ in some jurisdictions a more general statement is permissible, and such causes for new trial may be assigned under an allegation that the verdict is not sustained

[a] Verdict Contrary to Evidence. In Stevens v. Leonard, 154 Ind. 67, 56 N. E. 27, 77 Am. St. Rep. 446, the court said: "The first cause for which a new trial was claimed was that the verdict was contrary to the evidence; and the second, that the verdict was not sustained by sufficient evidence. The latter is the proper and statutory cause for which a new trial may be demanded, and, when stated, it is not necessary to allege that the verdict is contrary to the evidence. A verdict which is contrary to the evidence is correctly described in the motion for a new trial in the language of the statute, as not sustained by sufficient evidence."

[b] Though the statute requires a specification wherein the verdict or finding is unsupported by evidence, or wherein the alleged insufficiency of the evidence consists, a specification that there is no evidence to support the verdict or finding assailed is sufficient, for if there is no evidence such a specification is exact and definite. *Knott v. by sufficient evidence, and is the result of passion and prejudice,¹⁴ or is contrary to law and the evidence,¹⁵ or that "the verdict was wholly unwarranted by the evidence."¹⁶

(F.) ACCIDENT OR SURPRISE. — Where it is permissible to use the language of the statute,¹⁷ or refer to affidavits for the facts,¹⁸ a general assignment of accident or surprise would seem to be sufficient. However, in some jurisdictions, the motion must show what the alleged accident or mistake was, and that the facts are such as to warrant a new trial.¹⁹

(G.) NEWLY DISCOVERED EVIDENCE. — As in other cases, where a statement in the language of the statute,²⁰ or a reference to affidavits for the particulars²¹ is permitted, a general assignment of newly discovered evidence as a ground for new trial, is probably sufficient. But in any event it is necessary that either the motion or the affidavits show that the alleged evidence was discovered after the trial;²² also that the applicant could not have obtained the evidence by previous diligence, including a statement of what the acts of diligence were,²³ and what the newly discovered evidence is, so that the court and under the circumstances, specified by the statute.⁵¹ A petition, or complaint, for a new trial is an independent proceeding.⁵² While it grows out of the original action, it is a new and distinct action begun by the filing of a pleading.⁵³

b. Requisites of Petitions. — (I.) In General. — The petition should be entitled the same as the original action,⁵⁴ and should contain allegations of all the necessary facts required to make out a case for the granting of a new trial.⁵⁵ Neither the evidence nor the pleadings in the original case,⁵⁶ nor the evidence in support of the petition,⁵⁷ can

A new trial cannot be granted on a petition where the grounds alleged were known to the applicant before the trial,⁵⁸ or, in some jurisdictions, unless the applicant was unavoidably prevented from making his application during the time prescribed for a motion.⁵⁹ Consequently, the petition must show that the causes were discovered after the time in which a motion could be filed, or that the applicant was unavoidably prevented from making his motion.⁶⁰

(II.) Newly Discovered Evidence. — The petition, on the ground of newly discovered evidence, must show the character of the evidence, that it is material, not merely cumulative, and that it was discovered after the trial.⁶¹ The petition should also allege that the newly discovered evidence could not, by reasonable diligence, have been discovered in time for the trial,⁶² that due diligence was used,⁶³ and, in some jurisdictions, the facts constituting the alleged diligence must also be stated.⁶⁴

(III.) Accident and Surprise. — A petition for a new trial on the ground of accident, surprise, or mistake must set forth the facts upon which the some jurisdictions, like any other petition, it may be met with a motion to make more definite and certain.⁷⁹ The fact that it sets forth several grounds does not make it objectionable as stating several causes of action.⁸⁰

h. Answer.—In some jurisdictions, the statutes provide that the facts stated in the petition shall be considered as denied without answer.⁸¹ In others, however, an answer may be required to be filed.⁸²

i. Hearing.—The statutes usually provide for a prompt hearing of the petition,⁸³ and the issues are tried as in any other proceeding.⁸⁴

F. HEARING.—1. In General.—The practice in connection with the hearing and the decision upon motions for new trials is largely regulated by local rules of court and statutes.⁸⁵

2. Time of Hearing.—The time of the hearing is ordinarily fixed either by the rules or by statute, which may be within a specified time after filing the motion, or after judgment,⁸⁶ or at the earliest practical time after filing the affidavits or notice of intention,⁸⁷ or within the term at which the trial was held.⁸⁸ In the absence of such regulations, newly discovered evidence (1) is not demurrable for the reason that it contains merely a general allegation of diligence, and inability to obtain the evidence set out, where the particular acts of diligence are not called for. Scott v. Hawk, 105 Iowa 467, 75 N. W. 368. (2) "We do not think the question of the probable effect of the new evidence, where it is material and competent and not cumulative, is one to be determined upon a demurrer to the petition. Whether or not it is cumulative, however, may well be decided in that manner, and such a decision is open to review on appeal. 'No discretion is reposed in the court in determining whether or not evidence is cumulative. It is a bare legal proposition, which has been a fruitful subject of discussion in the courts for many years.' (Town of Manson v. Ware, 63 Iowa 345, 349.)" *Haughton v. the fixing of the time is within the discretion of the court.⁸⁹ Where based upon the minutes of the court, the motion should be brought on for hearing promptly while the facts are still fresh in the mind of the judge.⁹⁰

expressly provided by statute that the hearing may be in vacation or in chambers,⁹⁵ it must be conducted in court and at term time.⁹⁶

6. Assistance of Counsel.—The parties have a right to be heard by counsel.⁹⁷

7. Presence of Parties.—The parties, of course, have a right to be present, particularly in a criminal case.⁹⁸ In the latter class of cases the general rule seems to be that the presence of the accused is not necessary,⁹⁹ unless required by statute;¹ though there is authority to the contrary.² However, the court may refuse to hear the motion if the accused is not personally present,³ except in misdemeanor cases punishable only by fine.⁴

8. Before What Court.—Regularly, the motion is heard in the trial court, and by the judge who tried the case,⁵ although it may be heard by his successor, or by some other judge, in accordance with the local rules of court or statutes.⁶

9. Evidence and Record in Support of Application.—a. In General.—Matters of evidence in connection with applications for new trials will be found discussed in another work.⁷ The motion itself cannot speak as to the facts, but they must be made to appear in some other way.⁸ The character of the showing required depends largely upon the grounds themselves and whether the motion is based upon the record or minutes of the court, or upon affidavits or other extrinsic evidence.⁹

b. Oral Testimony.—The admission of oral testimony in support of a motion for new trial is, unless the statutes otherwise provide, a matter largely within the discretion of the court.¹⁰

c. Bill of Exceptions.—Whether a bill of exceptions is necessary or proper depends largely upon the grounds of the motion, the character of the evidence relied upon, and the statute or rules as to what the motion may or must be based on.¹¹ If such a bill be a necessary or proper method of getting into the record matters which would not otherwise be available on the hearing, it should be prepared in accordance with the requirements of the statute, if any, and the rules and principles elsewhere treated.¹²

[a] In absence of a statute, or a rule, requiring it, a bill of exceptions is not an essential, however, on the motion for a new trial, since the recollections of the court may be aided by other means of evidence. Chandler v. Thompson, 30 Fed. 38, 39.

[b] A bill of exceptions is necessary (1) to review sufficiency of evidence as a ground for a new trial. Ralston v. Kohl's Admr., 30 Ohio St. 92. (2) Where the motion is heard by a different judge from the one presiding at the trial, the verdict will not be set aside on the ground of excessive damages, unless all the evidence relating to the character and extent of the damage sustained is preserved by a bill of exceptions. Farshall v. Minneapolis & St. L. Ry. Co., 35 Fed. 649.

[c] A rule of court requiring a bill of exceptions is inconsistent with a statutory definition declaring a new trial to be a re-examination of an issue of fact "in the same court," since the court is bound to know, without such a bill, what occurred. Emery v. Emery, 54 Iowa 106, 6 N. W. 152.

a "statement," a "case," or by some equivalent name, the purpose of which is to furnish and preserve the necessary record evidence of the proceedings upon which the motion is founded.¹³ Where such a statement is essential, the motion cannot be determined before it has been settled,¹⁴ and an order for a new trial made without the necessary statement, or other substitute, cannot stand.¹⁵ It also furnishes, under some statutes, the particulars as to the grounds or errors relied upon where there has been a general statement in the notice or motion.¹⁶

e. Minutes of the Court.—In some states, the statutes provide that the motion for a new trial may be made upon the minutes of the court,¹⁷ or that the judge presiding at the trial may, in his discretion, entertain such a motion made upon his minutes.¹⁸ When the motion is made on the minutes, the court may take into consideration the pleadings, orders of the court on file, and reference may be made to the record, minute entries, depositions and any other documentary evidence offered at the trial, and to the report of the proceedings taken by the stenographer, or, if none, to such proceedings as are within the recollection of the judge.¹⁹ The fact that no written memoranda have been made

[b] Object of the Statute.—"There seems to be considerable doubt in the minds of attorneys, as to what the legislature meant in the amendment of 1907 by the use of the terms 'upon the minutes of the court.' . . . Other states have somewhat similar statutes, and a review of these, and the decisions of courts construing them, has led us to conclude that the purpose which our legislature had in view, doubtless, was to facilitate the proceeding for a new trial and save the moving party useless expense in the event his motion should be granted and no appeal taken. If we are correct in this conclusion, then it follows, in the absence of any restriction in the statute, that the review by the trial court may be as comprehensive as if all the proceedings had been reduced to writing and embodied in the judgment-roll, including a bill of exceptions." *State v. g. Affidavits. — (I.) In General. — Where the grounds for a new trial are not apparent of record, affidavits are generally required in support of the application.²⁵ They are usually filed, and the statutes or rules often expressly require them, when the motion is grounded upon (1) irregularities in the proceedings, (2) misconduct of the jury or prevailing party, (3) accident or surprise, and (4) newly discovered evidence.²⁶ Affidavits, however, are not binding upon the court, but are

[b] Admissible When. — Affidavits are not admissible for the purpose of presenting additional evidence upon the original issues except in case of newly discovered evidence. They are necessary, however, to establish grounds for a new trial that are dehors the record. Mayeski v. His Creditors, 40 La. Ann. 94, 4 So. 9; Cochrane v. Knowles, 3 G. Gr. (Iowa) 115.

[c] Covered by Bill of Exceptions. If the contents of proposed affidavits are substantially embodied in a bill of exceptions, it is not error to refuse to admit them. Pennsylvania R. Co. v. Connell, 127 Ill. 419, 20 N. E. 89.

[d] Where there is no statute regulating affidavits in support of motions for new trials, the matter is one of practice. They may be filed without leave of court, and the court in its discretion may grant a continuance, even at the hearing, to enable them to be prepared. Howland v. Reeves, 25 Mo. App. 458.

open to the scrutiny of its judgment,²⁷ and counter-affidavits may be filed by the adverse party.²⁸

(II.) Requisites. — Affidavits should be in the English language,²⁹ executed by competent witnesses,³⁰ and filed and served as required by law.³¹

(III.) Of Jurors. — It is a general rule, to which there are exceptions in some jurisdictions, that the affidavits of jurors are not admissible to impeach their verdict for irregularity of themselves or their associates, but that they are admissible for the purpose of sustaining the verdict.³²

G. DETERMINATION. — 1. Duty of the Court. — Upon the hearing, it is the duty of the court to consider the grounds for the motion. This means a judicial consideration, an exercise of judgment as to the sufficiency of the grounds. To refuse such consideration, and to overrule a motion arbitrarily, or pro forma, is error.³³ When the motion is based upon the ground of errors of law occurring at the trial, all rulings of the court made during the trial, and properly excepted to and presented, should again be considered by the court.³⁴ In applications based on the weight or the insufficiency of the evidence, it is the duty of the court to weigh the evidence,³⁵ and in case of alleged newly dis-

[a] But the mere refusal to hear argument on the motion, even in a criminal case, does not necessarily constitute reversible error. Hodge v. Territory, 12 Okla. 108, 69 Pac. 1077.

[b] Where a case is heard by the court without a jury, it is not error to overrule a motion for a new trial pro forma, refusing to hear it upon its merits, and the findings of fact and the judgment will not be disturbed by this court if the evidence is sufficient to sustain such findings and judgment. *Pinson v. [a] Not To Be Sustained Upon an Untried Theory.—"A verdict which, upon the issue submitted to the jury, is against the weight of the evidence introduced at the trial cannot be sus-

covered evidence, the questions to be considered are whether the evidence is, in fact, newly discovered and material, or whether merely cumulative, and whether diligence was exercised in its discovery.³⁶

2. Discretion of the Court.—In deciding a motion for a new trial not only the judicial, but also the discretionary, function of the court is invoked.³⁷ While there may be cases where the grounds for a new trial are so clear and imperative that, as a matter of justice, it may be the duty of the court to grant a new trial,³⁸ yet a new trial is not, unless expressly so given by statute, a matter of right,³⁹ and the court is not bound to grant a new trial even if both parties ask for it,⁴⁰ or because both parties are dissatisfied with the results;⁴¹ but as a general rule, the granting or refusing a new trial lies in the judicial discretion of the court.⁴² Thus, where the application alleges that the verdict is tained by the opinion of the court upon a distinct ground of liability, which has not been alleged or tried, and which can only be put in issue by an amendment of the declaration and by evidence which the jury have never been permitted to consider, nor the defendants to be heard upon before them." Elkins v. Boston & Albany Ry., 115 Mass. 190.

[b] Disputed Facts.—In a motion for a new trial on the minutes made upon a case and exceptions, all disputed facts must be found in favor of the party in whose favor the jury found. Clark v. Lyons, 38 Misc. 516, 77 N. Y. Supp. 967.

exercise its discretion in imposing such terms and conditions as may seem justified;⁵² and such a discretionary right is sometimes expressly conferred by the statutes.⁵³ For example, a new trial may be ordered unless the prevailing party will consent to a modification or change in the verdict or decision, where items have unjustly been included or excluded,⁵⁴ or the condition may be imposed that the new trial, if granted, shall be limited to certain issues,⁵⁵ or that a bond be given for the payment of the judgment and costs of the former trial.⁵⁶ A new trial has, also, been granted on condition that the parties waive any right of removal of the cause to a federal court,⁵⁷ and on condition that the right of appeal be waived.⁵⁸

grant new trials upon the merits only on payment of costs, except in particular cases. Later, it was held to be a matter entirely in the discretion of the court.⁵⁹

(B.) AMERICAN COURTS.—In American courts, it is the prevailing practice, either by force of statute or otherwise, that the court may, in its discretion, require as a condition to the granting of a new trial that the moving party shall pay the costs.⁶⁰

Reprint 797), or (5) the verdict was obtained by concealing a witness for the adverse party (Montpesson v. Randle, Bul. N. P. [Eng.] 328), or (6) by any improper artifice. Anderson v. George, 1 Burr. 352, 97 Eng. Reprint 349.

(II.) Nature of Grounds.—(A.) IN GENERAL.—It is, however, held, in some cases, that when a new trial is awarded as a matter of justice to the applicant where he was without fault, it is error to impose, as a condition, the payment of costs.⁶¹ The statute, moreover, may thus expressly provide.⁶² Accordingly, as in the English common law decisions, where the new trial is granted for errors of law,⁶³ or the jury returns a verdict contrary to law,⁶⁴ or where the ground for the new trial is the misconduct of the prevailing party,⁶⁵ or where the dam-

(2) An order granting a new trial on condition that "all costs" are paid is void; but an order may be made requiring the costs of the previous trial to be paid as a condition precedent. McClary v. Nash, 6 Ky. L. Rep. 302. And see Schwed v. Hartwitz, 23 Colo. 187, 47 Pac. 295, 58 Am. St. Rep. 221.

ages awarded are so small as to convince the mind that the jury acted under prejudice,⁶⁶ it is the rule that the payment of the costs of the former trial should not be imposed as a condition precedent to the granting of the motion for a new trial.

(B.) INSUFFICIENCY OF EVIDENCE.—Where the motion is grounded upon insufficiency of the evidence, some courts hold that no conditions can be imposed in the granting of a new trial since it is a matter of right;⁶⁷ other cases hold that the imposition of costs, as a condition precedent in such a case, is a matter within the sound, legal discretion of the court, where it does not appear that the verdict is perverse.⁶⁸ Still others hold that the motion should be granted only on condition that the moving party pay the costs,⁶⁹ unless the verdict is perverse, in which case no costs should be imposed.⁷⁰ In New York the different departments of the appellate division of the supreme court do not agree as to the rule to be followed.⁷¹

[a] Hardship of Payment.—It is held that even in case of hardship, the rule that a new trial will not be granted, on the ground that the verdict is against the weight of evidence, except upon the condition precedent of payment of costs nevertheless applies. O'Shea v. McLearn, 48 Hun 619, 1 N. Y. Supp. 407, 15 Civ. Proc. 69, 16 N. Y. St. 482; Carter v. Interurban St. Ry. Co., 86 N. Y. Supp. 206.

English Common Law Rule.—As previously stated, it was customary in the English common law courts to impose costs as a condition precedent to the granting of a new trial because the verdict was contrary to the evidence.

[b] Order Silent as to Grounds. Where the record does not show the ground for which a new trial was granted, and costs were imposed, it will be presumed, upon appeal, that the ground was insufficiency of evidence and that the costs were properly made a condition. Giese v. Milwaukee Electric R. & L. Co., 116 Wis. 66, 92 N. W. 356; Mills v. Conley, 110 Wis. 525, 86 N. W. 203.

[a] Meaning of Perverse Verdict. "A verdict of a jury which is wholly unsupported by the evidence is clearly a perverse verdict; as much so as if rendered in direct violation of the law of the case as laid down by the court upon the trial of the action." Schweickhart v. Stuewe, 75 Wis. 157, 162, 43 N. W. 722.

[c] Matter is largely within the discretion of the trial court, subject to appellate review. Dechambeau v.

(C.) ACCIDENT OR SURPRISE. — Costs may be imposed, in the discretion of the court, where the new trial is grounded on accident or surprise,⁷² and usually will be where the prevailing party was not in any way at fault.⁷³

(D.) NEWLY DISCOVERED EVIDENCE. — An applicant for a new trial on the ground of newly discovered evidence is usually required to pay the costs as a condition precedent,⁷⁴ although it is not always a requisite.⁷⁵

(III.) Time of Payment. — The order granting the new trial may fix the time of paying the costs or expenses,⁷⁶ or it may be fixed by statute.⁷⁷ If, however, no time is specified for such payment, a condition that the costs of the trial be paid means payable on demand.⁷⁸

[a] New York.—The payment of the taxable costs of the action up to the time of the making of the motion (for newly discovered evidence) should be imposed as a condition upon granting the motion. Walmsley v. Phillips, 119 N. Y. Supp. 227. See also Buffalo Cold Storage Co. v. Bacon, 136 App. Div. 263, 120 N. Y. Supp. 960 (holding that where in an action tried before a referee, and affirmed by the appellate division of the supreme court, the supreme court grants a new trial for newly discovered evidence, the order should be conditioned upon the applicant's paying the costs and disbursements of the trial already had, including referee's fees and disbursements in entering judgment, and the costs and disbursements upon the appeal from such judgment to the appellate division, and $10 costs of the motion for a new trial); Macaulay v. Anthony, 127 N. Y. Supp. 420, requiring payment of all costs and disbursements to date.

Supp. 96, 100, viz.: "The motion for new trial is granted upon defendants' paying to plaintiff's attorneys within 30 days after the entry of the order herein all the costs and disbursements taxed on the action, and in case of a failure so to do the motion is denied, with costs."

[b] Manner of Payment.—Nothing but payment in cash will suffice. A set-off for goods furnished is not sufficient. Screws v. Upshaw, 34 Ala. 496.

Provision for extension of the time is sometimes made by statute or rule.⁷⁹

(IV.) Failure To Pay.—Failure to pay the costs, where payment is a condition precedent, is sufficient cause to vacate the order,⁸⁰ and it is sometimes so provided by statute.⁸¹ An order imposing costs is not necessarily, however, regarded as a condition precedent, and if the costs are not paid, the order for a new trial may, nevertheless, stand, and the costs may be collected as in case of any other judgment.⁸²

[a] Meaning of Condition Precedent.—Distinguishing between an order setting aside the verdict, and an order granting a new trial, the New Jersey supreme court has said: "The payment of costs, is no doubt a condition precedent; not however, to setting aside the verdict, but to the party's having a new trial. The court never say to a party, we will set aside the verdict against you, if you will pay the costs. The question, whether a verdict ought, or ought not to be set aside, although it is said to be addressed to the sound discretion of the court, is nevertheless a question of law; and when set aside, it is because justice forbids that any judgment should be rendered upon it. But the payment of costs, when it is ordered, is annexed as a condition upon which the party may have a new trial; and yet not strictly as a condition in such a sense, that if it is not performed, there shall be no new trial. It is rather an order on the party, at whose instance the verdict has been set aside, that he shall pay the costs of the first trial; which order, like other interlocutory orders, may be enforced by attachment. When a verdict has been set aside at the instance of the plaintiff and a new trial granted, on payment of costs by him, it is true, the defendant has an additional remedy; he may apply to the court to restrain the party from proceeding to a second trial, until the costs of the former trial have been paid. It then becomes, as to the plaintiff, a condition precedent. The court may tie up his hands until he pays the costs, or if he does not pay them and bring his cause to a trial within such time as the court shall prescribe, he may be non-pressed for not going to trial." Gilliland v. Rappleyea, 15 N. J. L. 133, 142.

82. Ala.—Ex parte Beavers, 34 Ala. 71. Ky.—Dana v. Gill, 5 J. J. Marsh. 242, 20 Am. Dec. 255. Miss.—Johnson v. Taylor, Reed & Co., 3 Smed. & M. 92. N. Y.—Anderson v. Rome, etc. R. R. Co., 54 N. Y. 334, 343. Ohio.—Heffner v. Scranton, 27 Ohio St. 579; Robinson v. Kious, 4 Ohio St. 593. Tex. Fenn v. Gulf, C. & S. F. Ry. Co., 76 Tex. 380, 13 S. W. 273, holding that the word "condition" in the order should not be construed in its technical sense as a condition precedent, but merely as "terms" not affecting the absolute character of the part of the order granting the new trial. Compare Town v. Guerguin, 93 Tex. 608, 57 S. W. 565.

[a] Not a Condition Precedent. "We do not mean to hold that a new trial may not be granted with a stipulation for payment of costs. But such stipulation is not in the nature of a condition precedent. Whether costs are paid or not paid, the order stands; the new trial is granted; the remaining portion of the order is to be enforced, as orders or judgments are usually enforced; and an execution for costs may be had, which is the proper remedy. Even if such execution were fruitless, it would be an unwise exercise of justice to deprive a man of his legal right to a new trial because he was unable to pay for it." Heffner v. Scranton, 27 Ohio St. 579, 584.

c. Increase of Inadequate Recovery.—In some jurisdictions, the court may grant a new trial on the ground of an inadequate verdict unless the defendant shall pay an increased sum.⁸³ It is held, elsewhere, however, that the court has no right to impose such a condition.⁸⁴

d. Decrease of Excessive Recovery.—The right of the court to compel the successful party to remit the excess of damages awarded where the recovery is excessive, is elsewhere treated.⁸⁵ It has been held that a remittitur as to an excessive recovery of land may be directed,⁸⁶ though there are some authorities to the contrary.⁸⁷

4. Dismissal of Proceedings.—For failure to comply with the various requirements relating to applications for new trials, where such requirements are made mandatory by rules of court or by statute, the application will be dismissed. Thus, failure to file the motion in time,⁸⁸ or delays or defects in the service of notice of the motion, when notice is required,⁸⁹ or failure to file required evidence, such as a brief of the evidence,⁹⁰ may furnish good grounds for a motion to dismiss. Likewise, material defects in the required documentary evidence,⁹¹ or delay in procuring a settlement of the case,⁹² may be proper cause for dismissal. Moreover, proceedings to obtain a new trial will be considered abandoned when a movant unduly delays the prosecution of his motion

[b] When Process Cannot Issue. But where the order is in such form as to be conditional, payment being optional with the party to whom the new trial is conditionally granted, process cannot issue to compel it. See Ex parte Beavers, 34 Ala. 71.

to a hearing.⁹³ In the absence of mandatory requirements, motions to dismiss a motion for a new trial rest largely in the discretion of the court.⁹⁴

5. Order Granting or Refusing.⁹⁵ — a. In General. — An order granting a new trial should specify the grounds upon which the order is made,⁹⁶ although it has been held that a statute making it the duty of the court to do so is merely directory.⁹⁷ If the new trial is granted only in respect to a part of the issues, the order should specify the particular issues to be retried.⁹⁸ If the motion is denied, in some jurisdictions a party, on request, is entitled to have the court file its reasons for overruling the motion.⁹⁹

b. Effect of Order. — By the operation of an order granting a new trial, the cause, in contemplation of law, is precisely in the same condition as if no previous trial had been held,¹ and the verdict and answers to particular questions, if any, are swept aside.² The order suspends the judgment, if entered,³ and the statutes sometimes expressly such an order it becomes final and the trial court's authority to modify or set it aside ceases except as otherwise provided by statute, as in case of mistake, inadvertence, or excusable neglect.¹⁰ After the expiration of such term, however, the court, in most states, has no jurisdiction over the matter.¹¹

cause it is a renewed motion.¹⁵ By statute, however, a judgment may become final upon the denial of a motion for a new trial, and thus leave the court without jurisdiction to entertain a subsequent motion.¹⁶

H. REVIEW IN HIGHER COURT.—1. Mandamus.—Trial courts being clothed with authority in the exercise of a sound legal discretion to grant new trials, cannot be compelled by mandamus to grant such remedies,¹⁷ nor can any alleged error in granting or refusing to grant a new trial be corrected by mandamus.¹⁸ Mandamus may, however, lie to compel a judge to hear and determine a motion for a new trial. He cannot be compelled to render a particular decision, but he may properly be compelled to make some decision.¹⁹

2. Prohibition.—On the other hand, however, the writ of prohibition may be invoked to prevent the consideration of a motion to grant a new trial where the lower court has no power to grant it, since such an act is not merely erroneous, but is void for want of jurisdiction.²⁰

3. Certiorari.—Where the trial court has jurisdiction to hear the motion, its order cannot be reviewed on certiorari.²¹

4. Error and Appeal.—a. Right To Review.—At common law, the granting or the refusing of a new trial was entirely discretionary with the trial court, and error for the purpose of review could not be predicated upon the manner in which such discretion was exercised.²² No writ of error lay at common law, or under the Statute of Edw. I., to the decision on a motion for a new trial.²³

The common law rule obtains in the federal courts, and the decision of the trial court upon a motion for a new trial is not reviewable.²⁴ In many of our states, it is also held that such orders rest in the discretion of the trial court, and that, in the absence of legislation, there is no direct appeal or writ of error from them.²⁵ In some states, however, such orders may be reviewed on appeal from the final judg-

[a] Errors of Law.—In some jurisdictions, an appeal lies only when alleged errors of law are involved in the motion for the new trial. Thus, in Minnesota, the statute explicitly provides that an order granting a new trial is not appealable unless it is expressly stated in the order or memo-

a ruling upon a new trial motion when such motion is based upon errors of law, does not apply to a motion depending upon a question of fact, as, for example, newly discovered evidence, or insufficiency of the evidence to justify the verdict.²⁹ Generally an order denying a new trial is regarded as a "final order" under a statute making such an order appealable,³⁰ but the contrary is true as to an order granting a new trial.³¹ It has been held under a statute authorizing an appeal "from an order affecting a substantial right," that an order denying a new trial is not such an order.³²

[a] An order granting a motion for a new trial (1) is not a final order. It leaves the rights of litigants undetermined. The case stands as though it never had been tried. The order merely vacates the former judgment for the purpose of a new trial on the merits of the original action. Pope v. Olsen, 14 Ariz. 528, 132 Pac. 434; Spicer v. Simms, 6 Ariz. 347, 57 Pac. 610. preparing the way for review must be taken in case of an appeal of a ruling on a motion for a new trial, as in all other cases. If the motion is to be resisted, on appeal, on account of failure to observe proper proceedings in the application, due objection must be made, as, for example, that the motion was not filed in time,³³ or that the required notice was not given,³⁴ except where this is regarded as a jurisdictional defect,³⁵ or that the motion does not comply with the requirements,³⁶ since such questions cannot be raised for the first time on appeal. It is essential that there should be a ruling upon the motion,³⁷ and due exception must also be taken to the ruling of the court, either in granting or refusing the motion,³⁸ in order to

c. The Record. — (I.) In General. — In order that an appellate court may review any proceedings of a court below it is necessary that all matters requisite for the intelligent consideration of such proceedings should appear on the record.⁴⁰ Consequently, in preparing the record for the review of an order granting or refusing a new trial, certain essentials must be observed, and the facts upon which the trial court acted must appear.⁴¹

(II.) Motion and Grounds. — The motion for the new trial, including the grounds thereof, must appear upon the record.⁴² This means a

[a] Unsupported by or Contrary to Evidence.—An order granting a new trial on the ground that the verdict was unsupported by, or was contrary to, evidence cannot be reviewed on a mere allegation that such a ruling was error. Potts v. Bonds, 10 S. C. 498.

[b] Verdict Contrary to Law.—The evidence given on the trial must be brought up in order to review a decision on a motion grounded on the reason that the verdict was contrary to law. Dyer v. Hatch, 1 Ark. 339.

(B.) AT THE HEARING. — In order that the appellate court may review the order, it is also necessary that the evidence considered on the hearing should appear on the record.⁵² Thus where the motion was based on newly discovered evidence,⁵³ misconduct of the jurors,⁵⁴ or of the prevailing party,⁵⁵ or surprise and irregularities,⁵⁶ the evidence used at the hearing must be incorporated in the record.

(VIII.) Instructions. — Where the motion for the new trial is based upon errors in giving or refusing instructions, the instructions in question must appear of record.⁵⁷

(IX.) Assignment of Errors. — In connection with the appeal there must be an assignment of errors, and the order of the court in granting or refusing a new trial must be assigned as error.⁵⁸ If the motion was based on several grounds a general assignment of error is insufficient; it should set forth the different grounds separately.⁵⁹ In some jurisdictions, however, a general assignment of error in overruling the motion is held sufficient.⁶⁰

d. Nature and Scope of Review. — (I.) In General. — The general principle that appellate courts will not review questions that could have been but were not brought to the attention of the trial court by a motion for a new trial, has been previously considered.⁶¹

On error or appeal from an order granting or refusing a new trial generally the appellate court reviews merely the decision upon the motion, that is, whether or not the lower court erred in granting or refusing the motion.⁶² No grounds for a new trial will be considered

(IV.) Presumptions.—As a rule, in absence of anything to the contrary in the record, the regularity of the proceedings to procure a new trial, as also upon the hearing, will be presumed.⁷⁴ Likewise, the order granting,⁷⁵ or refusing,⁷⁶ a new trial will be presumed to be correct in absence of a positive showing to the contrary in the record.

(V.) Discretion of Trial Court.—It has already been stated that the power to grant or to refuse a motion for a new trial rests in the judicial discretion of the trial court.⁷⁷ Moreover, when an appeal is allowed from such an order, the presumption is always in favor of the proper exercise of such discretionary power.⁷⁸ Consequently, the court's decision will not be disturbed except in cases of manifest abuse.⁷⁹ Moreover, a stronger showing must be made to obtain the

[a] Discretion Restricted by Legal Principles.—The discretion vested in the trial court to grant a new trial is neither an arbitrary nor a general discretion. It is based upon the theory that the judge who tries a case, having the parties, their witnesses and counsel, before him, with opportunity to observe their demeanor and conduct during the trial, and to note all incidents occurring during its progress likely to affect the results thereof, is better qualified to judge whether a fair trial has been had, and substantial justice done, than the appellate tribunal. But the fact that the legislative assembly passed a law giving the right of appeal from such orders indicates a purpose to restrict the rulings upon the subject to the application of legal principles. Clifford v. Denver, S. P. & P. R. Co., 12 Colo. 125, 20 Pac. 333.

verse such an order unless it appears that the court acted arbitrarily or committed some error of law.⁸¹ Nevertheless, in a clear case of abuse of discretion in the trial court, an appellate court will not hesitate to reverse the judgment and to correct the error.⁸²

(VI.) Review of Evidence.—In connection with the appellate consideration of orders granting or refusing new trials, the general principles that an appellate court is not a trier of facts, but passes upon questions of law,⁸³ is often emphasized by the courts.⁸⁴ Moreover, with

[a] Must Be a Legal Ground for the Motion.—In the case of Clifford v. Denver, S. P. & P. R. Co., 12 Colo. 125, 20 Pac. 333, the supreme court said: "The general rule so often announced, that a stronger presumption obtains in favor of an order granting than one denying a new trial, is urged in the present case as a strong reason why the ruling should not be disturbed. This rule should also be limited to cases wherein the ground on which the new trial was granted constitutes a legal ground for such order, and the alleged causes have an actual existence."

[b] When the bill of exceptions sets out the ground or reason on which the trial court acted, this court will reverse the judgment, if those grounds and reasons appear to be clearly insufficient, although generally it takes a stronger case to reverse an order granting than it does one refusing a new trial. *Black's Admr. v. respect to the insufficiency, weight, and conflict of evidence, great deference is given to the opinion of the trial court,⁸⁵ and orders granting or refusing new trials upon such grounds will seldom be disturbed.⁸⁶ Also, an order granting a new trial on the ground of the insufficiency of the evidence requires a stronger showing to warrant its reversal than one refusing a new trial on such ground.⁸⁷ Where, however, the evidence presents a substantial conflict, and the trial judge who saw and heard the witnesses has refused a new trial, the order will usually be affirmed.⁸⁸

e. Disposition of Cause.—The general principles relating to the disposal of a cause on appeal have been previously considered in this work.⁸⁹ Ordinarily, where appellant pays no attention to his case in the appellate court, the decision of the lower court will be affirmed without an examination of the record.⁹⁰

Where the sole question before the appellate court is the alleged error of the lower court in granting or refusing a new trial, the court may affirm or reverse the order but will not, ordinarily render judgment,⁹¹ and upon the reversal of an order refusing a new trial, the case is ordinarily remanded for retrial, the effect of the reversal being to vacate the judgment just as if there had been a direct appeal from the judgment.⁹² In some jurisdictions, however, judgment absolute should be rendered against the appellant, either because only cases in which this is a proper judgment, can be appealed,⁹³ or because appellant is required to stipulate that such a judgment may be rendered.⁹⁴

Where the new trial proceedings are begun by petition, upon which there has been a trial, if the action of the court below upon this matter is not supported by the evidence, it will be reversed and remanded for a retrial of the issue as to the right to a new trial.⁹⁵ If the verdict conflicts with the instructions the courts which follow the rule that the jury must follow the instructions even though erroneous,⁹⁶ will not review the instructions to determine whether they are erroneous or correct.⁹⁷

IV. PROCEEDINGS AT NEW TRIAL. — A. IN GENERAL. — As previously stated, the effect of an order granting a new trial is to leave the parties just as if no trial had taken place;⁹⁸ consequently, the new trial proceeds as if it were an original action.⁹⁹ The cause is docketed,¹ and due notice served upon the adverse party.² The pleadings may be amended, conformably to the rules, at the discretion of the court,³ and, likewise, new parties may be added.⁴

B. ISSUES.—Where the new trial goes to the whole case, it must be retried from the beginning upon all the issues of fact which are involved.⁷ Where, however, the new trial is limited to a part of the issues, or to less than all of the parties, the proceedings are confined to the issues, or parties, affected by the order.⁸

C. HOW AFFECTED BY FORMER TRIAL.—As a rule, the new trial is not affected by the former proceedings, verdict, or judgment,⁹ and it is sometimes so provided by statute.¹⁰ A defendant may plead defenses other than those pleaded on the former trial,¹¹ although it is held that a plaintiff cannot change the former theory of his case to an entirely inconsistent theory.¹²

D. CONDUCT OF THE TRIAL.—The new trial should be conducted with as little prejudice to either party as if it had never been heard before.¹³ A new jury is impaneled,¹⁴ the burden of proof remains as on the former trial,¹⁵ unless it has been changed by a change in the pleadings or issues,¹⁶ and, as a rule, the evidence is presented anew.¹⁷ Moreover, proper evidence not produced at the former trial may be admitted.¹⁸ Where the new trial is confined to a part of the former issues, the evidence should be likewise limited.¹⁹

A party is not ordinarily estopped as to matters of evidence by his action on the former trial,²⁰ nor is the court not bound by its rulings at the former trial,²¹ and inadmissible evidence should not be admitted even if received at the former trial.²² The court should not

E. VERDICT. — The former verdict should not be referred to either in evidence or in argument.²⁴ On the second trial the jury may award damages in excess of those allowed on the first.²⁵

V. NUMBER OF NEW TRIALS. — A. AT COMMON LAW. — 1. In General. — The granting of a new trial does not exhaust the discretion of the trial judge to grant another new trial,²⁶ and, unless restricted by statute, there is no limit to the number of successive new trials that may be granted.²⁷ However, the discretionary power of the court to grant even a second new trial should be exercised with caution.²⁸

2. Successive Concurring Verdicts. — While another new trial may be granted even after two concurring verdicts,²⁹ yet courts rarely grant a new trial after two verdicts upon the facts in favor of the same party except for error of law.³⁰ Thus, it is seldom that after two concurring verdicts a new trial will be granted on the ground that the verdict is contrary to the weight of evidence.³¹ However, the mere fact that even three successive verdicts for the same party has been returned, does not of itself make it the legal duty of the court to allow the last verdict to stand if unsupported by evidence,³² and where there is no evidence to sustain the verdict,³³ or where juries manifestly disregard the instructions of the court, it is the duty of the court to set aside any number of verdicts.³⁴

B. STATUTORY RESTRICTIONS. — 1. In General. —In some states, the statutes regulate the number of new trials that may be granted. The most common provision is to the effect that not more than two new trials shall be granted to the same party in the same cause.³⁵ Other statutes provide that for certain expressed causes not more than two new trials shall be allowed,³⁶ while still other statutes provide that, except in case of certain enumerated grounds, the number shall be limited to two,³⁷ or even one new trial.³⁸

2. Construction.—There is much diversity of opinion in the construction of statutes regulating the number of new trials.³⁹ In some states, a statute providing that not more than two new trials shall be granted, no exceptions being expressed in the statute, is held not to restrict the common law right of the courts to grant new trials for errors of law;⁴⁰ but it has been held that such a statute is restrictive generally, and that not more than two new trials can be granted to the same party, although one or both of the verdicts were set aside for errors of law.⁴¹

A statute in terms limited to new trials on specified grounds does not prevent the granting of new trials on other grounds.⁴² Nor does a statute specifically excepting certain grounds, prevent new trials on the excepted grounds;⁴³ and it has been held that such a statute

[a] The statute means that where the facts of the case have been fairly left to the jury upon a proper charge of the court and they have twice found a verdict for the same party, each of which having been set aside by the court; if the same party obtain another verdict in like manner, it shall not be disturbed. But this act did not intend to prevent the court granting new trials for error in the charge of the court to the jury, for error in the admission of, or rejection of testimony, for misconduct of the jury and the like." East Tennessee & G. Irons, 47 Ind. 445, the supreme court said: "We think the true rule is, that where two new trials have been granted in the same cause to the same party, either by the court below or by this court, exclusively for any of the reasons specified in section 352 (the statute), another new trial cannot be granted to the same party in such cause for any of the reasons specified in said section; but that this court may reverse a judgment for the erroneous rulings of the court below on the pleadings, or other matters which do not constitute reasons for a new trial, although such reversal may result in another trial in the court below upon the merits of the case." [a] Under the Missouri statute (1) excepting new trials for errors in law is not intended to and does not prevent the court from granting new trials of its own motion for its own errors.⁴⁴ In determining the number of new trials prohibited, although not expressly so stating, the statute is construed to mean new trials to the same party.⁴⁵ A re-statement granted after a default set aside, is not counted as a new trial,⁴⁶ and, in some states, a new trial granted by the appellate court is not included.⁴⁷

3. Appellate Courts.—The courts are not agreed as to the application of the statutes to appellate courts. Some cases hold that the statutes restrict the appellate courts in granting new trials upon the merits of the evidence, although not where new trials are granted for errors of the trial court.⁴⁸ Other cases hold, however, that the statutes do not apply to the appellate courts, but only to the trial courts.⁴⁹

by the triers of the facts and for misbehavior of the jury, any number of new trials may be granted for errors in instructions or in admitting or excluding evidence, or if the jury misbehaves or errs in matters of law. See Ewart v. Peniston, 233 Mo. 695, 136 S. W. 422. (2) A verdict may be so contrary to the evidence as to amount, in legal effect, to misbehavior on the part of the jury, or may be regarded as springing from improper motives, and should not be permitted to stand in any event. *Partello v. II. WHO AUTHORIZED TO MAKE ENTRY.—Authority to enter a nolle prosequi rests usually in the prosecuting attorney alone;² it cannot be entered by a court on its own motion,³ unless authorized⁴

[a] Source of Authority.—"The power to enter a nolle prosequi is held by the attorney general virtute officii. He exerts it upon his official responsibility. The court has no right to interfere with its exercise. They can only judge of the effect of the act when done, and of the legal consequences which may follow from it. by statute. Nor can a nolle prosequi be entered by others,⁵ even though they be connected with the case.⁶

III. MANNER OF PROCEEDING.—A. LEAVE OF COURT.—In the absence of a statute requiring leave of court to enter a nolle prosequi,⁷ it is not necessary;⁸ the usual practice, however, is to obtain such leave.⁹

Motion To Obtain Leave.—If leave of court is necessary or desired, it is obtainable on motion, either oral or written, setting forth briefly the reasons therefor.¹⁰

B. DECLARATION OF PROSECUTOR.—Where it is neither customary to obtain leave of court, nor required by statute, the prosecutor merely makes a written or oral declaration of the action he has taken.¹¹

IV. GROUNDS.—The prosecuting attorney is not restricted by any rule as to grounds upon which a nolle prosequi may be entered.¹² Generally, however, his motion is based upon the reason that the evi-

V. SCOPE AND TIME OF ENTRY.—A. TO THE WHOLE INDICTMENT.—If to the whole indictment, a nolle prosequi may be entered at any time before the trial is entered upon;¹⁶ but not thereafter, unless with defendant's consent.¹⁷ There are cases, however, which would seem to permit such action up to the time of the verdict,¹³

I. NOTICE IN JUDICIAL PROCEEDINGS GENERALLY.¹

When notice is required in a judicial proceeding, a written notice is intended;² and, according to some authorities, one capable of service, proof, return and filing is intended.³

II. NECESSITY FOR AVERRING NOTICE.—A. AS AFFECTED BY PECULIAR KNOWLEDGE OF PLAINTIFF.—The general rule is that where the matter alleged in the pleading is to be considered as lying more properly in the knowledge of the plaintiff than of the defendant, the plaintiff should allege that the defendant had notice thereof,⁴ or allege facts showing an excuse for failure to give such notice;⁵ but notice need not be so averred where the matter does not lie more properly in the knowledge of the plaintiff,⁶ as where the defendant has the same means of information as the plaintiff.⁷

B. WHEN NOTICE REQUIRED BY CONTRACT. — Where notice is necessary by the terms of the contract on which the suit is based, that notice must be alleged.⁸

III. SUFFICIENCY OF ALLEGATION, ETC. — When the pleader alleges facts which in law constitute notice, it is equivalent to an allegation that the parties affected had notice.⁹ Where notice is required, it should appear that it was given at the proper time,¹⁰ and to the proper person.¹¹ It is held that where notice is required by law a general averment is not sufficient, but the notice should be particularly set forth to enable the court to determine its sufficiency.¹²

Where notice by mail is relied upon, the plaintiff must allege facts showing a strict compliance with the statutory requirements as to such a notice.¹³

IV. AVERRING EXCUSE OR WAIVER OF NOTICE. — Where an excuse for failure to give notice,¹⁴ or a waiver of notice is relied

V. PLEA DENYING NOTICE.¹⁶ — A denial of notice, "directly or indirectly," includes a denial of notice by agent;¹⁷ and an allegation of lack of notice includes constructive as well as actual knowledge unless the context of the pleading evinces the contrary.¹⁸ An answer denying that notice was served on the defendants as required by law does not put in issue the fact of notice.¹⁹ Where defendants are jointly interested, a general allegation of no notice to them is all that is necessary, especially on general demurrer.²⁰

VI. ISSUES, PROOF, AND VARIANCE.²¹ — Generally an averment of due notice is not sustained by proof of facts showing an excuse for failure to give notice,²² or a waiver of notice,²³ though there are authorities to the contrary.²⁴ An allegation of constructive notice by reason of the recording of certain papers does not raise an issue as to actual notice.²⁵ Where no particular kind of notice is averred, the party may prove any proper notice which will impose upon the adverse party the duty averred, with respect to the subject matter involved.²⁶

VII. QUESTIONS FOR COURT AND JURY.²⁷ — The question whether or not a person had or received notice is generally one of fact for the jury;²⁸ but the question of constructive notice is usually a

I. GENERAL STATEMENT OF REMEDIES. — There are, in all, four remedies which an injured party may use against a wrongdoer who erects, fosters or maintains a nuisance.¹ First, he may sum-

1. See infra, this article.
[a] These remedies have superseded the ancient remedies of the common law which were: (1) A writ of quod permittat prosternere, which was in the nature of a writ of right commanding the defendant to allow the plaintiff to abate the nuisance or show cause why he should not do so (see 3 Black. Com. 221; Brown v. Woodworth, 5 Barb. [N. Y.] 550; Waggoner v. Jer- maine, 3 Denio [N. Y.] 306, 45 Am. Dec. 474); and (2) an assize of nuisance, which was a common law writ issued at the instance of a tenant of a freehold and commanding the sheriff to summon a jury to view the premises, and if they found for the plaintiff he was entitled to a judgment abating the nuisance and awarding damages. See Jenks, Short Hist. of English Law 144; 3 Black. Com. 221. (3) These an-marily abate the nuisance himself.² Second, he may maintain a civil action and recover damages.³ Third, he may invoke the aid of equity, and enjoin the nuisance.⁴ Fourth, he may punish the offender by instituting a criminal action against him.⁵

II. SUMMARY ABATEMENT.—It is generally recognized that an individual, without the assistance of legal process may under certain circumstances summarily abate a nuisance both public,⁶ and private.⁷ So also, the public authorities may under some circumstances summarily abate a public nuisance.⁸

cient remedies are practically obsolete both in the United States (Ky.—Tate v. Parrish, 7 Mon. 325. N. Y.—Waggoner v. Jermaine, 3 Denio 306, 45 Am. Dec. 474. Pa.—*Barnet v. St. 3 & 4 Wm. IV., ch. 27, §36.

[b] The common law doctrine of nuisance is as old as the common law itself. Our oldest law writers treat of the subject. See citations from Glandvill and Bracton in Bigelow's Lead. Cas. on Torts, 462.

III. ACTIONS AT LAW.—A. GENERALLY.—It is well settled that one damaged by a nuisance may maintain an action at law therefor.⁹ He may in the same action obtain a judgment abating the nuisance and awarding the damages caused thereby.¹⁰

Successive Suits.¹¹—When the nuisance complained of is not of a permanent character, but is temporary and abatable, the continuance thereof gives rise to successive rights of action, which may be enforced from time to time;¹² but it is otherwise if the nuisance is of such character that its continuance is necessarily an injury of a permanent character.¹³

B. JURISDICTION of an action for damages in nuisance cases is largely a matter of constitutional and statutory control in the several states.¹⁴

Amount Involved as It Affects Jurisdiction.—In an action for the abatement of a nuisance, the value of the object to be attained controls.¹⁵

C. VENUE.¹⁶—If the action is brought to abate the nuisance as well as to obtain damages arising therefrom, the venue should be laid in the county where the nuisance is located.¹⁷ But the definition of nuisance by statute in some states has given the action a transitory character, even where abatement is the gist of the action.¹⁸

Where damages only are the gist of the action, there is strong authority, as well as reason, for the view that the action may be brought in the county where the injury is sustained.¹⁹

erected must appear in the declaration or complaint.³²

Nature of the Plaintiff's Interest.—At the old common law, in a suit brought for the abatement of a nuisance by the writ of nuisance, the declaration was required to allege a freehold or a possessory interest in the realty since the action was a real action.³³ This rule has been followed in some of the modern cases on the theory that a nuisance is an injury to land.³⁴ But statutes of many states have declared that a nuisance may affect the person as well as property and hence it is not necessary in those states at least, to allege that the plaintiff has even a possessory interest in the realty, if the nuisance affects his personal well being.³⁵

Defendant's Act and Liability Therefor.—The declaration or complaint should set forth the defendant's act and his liability therefor.³⁶

b. Notice To Remove.—If the action is brought against defendant for a nuisance which he did not create, but continued, it is necessary to allege that he was notified to abate or remove the nuisance.³⁷

But, by statute an allegation of notice to remove a nuisance is sometimes unnecessary.³⁸

c. Averments as to Damages.—An allegation of general damages will usually suffice when the nuisance alleged is private;³⁹ yet if there are certain specific elements of injury that do not necessarily arise and are not implied by law these specific damages must be alleged, even in the case of a private nuisance to warrant a recovery for more than the ordinary damages.⁴⁰ If the cause of action is based upon a public nuisance an allegation of special damages is mandatory.⁴¹

[a] The reason is that, in the absence of any notice to the contrary, the grantee or continuer of the nuisance, has a right to assume that the structures upon the land are rightfully there, and that, even where they may seem to interfere with the usual rights appurtenant to other estates, he may properly assume that the right thus to interfere has been lawfully obtained, and it is inequitable to subject him to damages until he had notice that in maintaining the structure or work complained of he is infringing upon the rights of others. 2. Plea or Answer.⁴² — In those states where common law pleading prevails, the usual plea is "not guilty," and any substantive defense may be shown thereunder.⁴³

F. TRIAL.⁴⁴ — 1. Variance. — The general rule that the pleadings and the proof must substantially correspond obtains.⁴⁵

2. Questions of Law and Fact.⁴⁶ — The question as to what is a nuisance is a question of law for the court.⁴⁷ So whether the nuisance is permanent or not has been held to be a question for the court.⁴⁸ But it is for the jury to say whether acts complained of, not amounting to a nuisance per se, constitute a nuisance or not.⁴⁹ It is also a question of fact for the jury whether the nuisance is the cause⁵⁰ of the nuisance, for that alone will not entitle them to maintain an action. Thelen v. Farmer, 36 Minn. 225, 30 N. W. 670, excellent case collecting authorities.

be denied if the injury is trifling, transient or temporary;⁶⁰ or if the right infringed is technical, or nominal merely.⁶¹ It is clear that equity will not interfere in any case if the nuisance complained of can be redressed by an action at law.⁶² So also equity will not grant such relief if there is a statutory remedy that is adequate.⁶³

Multiplicity of Suits.—When it is clear that the nature of the wrong complained of will lead to vexations, litigation and a multiplicity of suits, the plenary power of equity will give ample protection by injunction.⁶⁴

2. Laches and Acquiescence.—Equity protects the vigilant and not those who slumber, hence tacit acquiescence in the alleged nuisance for a long time will result in a denial of equitable relief.⁶⁵

3. Balance of Injury.—In some jurisdictions, if the court finds in the adjustment of the equities involved that the injury to the complainant is slight in comparison to the injury caused the public by enjoining the nuisance, relief will be refused;⁶⁶ on the other hand, if the injury to the public is slight or disproportionate to the injury suffered by the complainant the injunction will issue.⁶⁷ There are many authorities, however, which refuse to concede that the balance of injury should have any weight in the granting or denying of a restraining decree, if private persons are involved.⁶⁸

[a] Reason.—"This court has never regarded a criminal prosecution, which can only dispose of an existing nuisance and cannot prevent a renewal of the nuisance, for which a new prosecution must be brought, as a complete and adequate remedy for a wrong inflicted upon the public. The public authorities have a right to institute the suit where the general public welfare demands it and damages to the public are not susceptible of computation. The maintenance of the public health, morals, safety and welfare is on a plane above mere pecuniary damage although not susceptible of measurement in money and to say that a court of equity may not enjoin a public nuisance because property rights are not involved, would be to say that the state is unable to enforce the law or protect its citizens from public wrongs." *Stead v. a complainant is clearly shown and the unlawful use of defendant's property which injured complainant in person or property is clearly settled.⁷¹ A previous decision at law that a nuisance exists is insufficient in any event if an appeal or writ of review is pending,⁷² and if defendant in his answer admits plaintiff's right or the fact that the nuisance exists, a trial at law would serve no useful purpose.⁷³ If the object to be attained is a temporary injunction merely, a previous trial at law is unnecessary.⁷⁴

After a previous trial at law, a restraining order will issue as of course, provided the nuisance is of a constantly recurring character.⁷⁵

e. Public Character of Nuisance.—The accusation should allege facts showing the public character of the nuisance charged as the offense.⁴⁵

When Nuisance Involves Violation of Public Duty.—An allegation of the official or public duty and the special circumstances creating it must be distinctly alleged, in all cases involving a neglect of public duty resulting in a nuisance.⁴⁶

2. Conclusion.—At common law it is necessary to allege in conclusion that the acts complained of were “to the common nuisance (ad commune nocumentum) of all of the citizens of the state there residing, inhabiting and passing,” or words of similar import.⁴⁷ But this is no longer necessary in some states.⁴⁸

C. TRIAL.⁴⁹—1. Variance.—The general rule obtains in a prosecution for a nuisance that the issues of fact raised by the pleadings and the proof must substantially correspond.⁵⁰

Kings County Iron Foundry Co.*, 209 N. Y. 207, 102 N. E. 598. Pa.—Barker v. Com., 19 Pa. 412.

[a] Sufficient Averment.—Where the indictment alleged that the acts of the defendant injured and endangered the comfort and repose, health and safety of the persons using the streets and living in the dwellings, buildings and premises in the neighborhood, it was held sufficient; the court said the expression “any considerable number of persons” is used solely to differentiate a public nuisance from a private nuisance. But a considerable number of persons does not mean, necessarily, a very great or any particular number of persons. People v. Kings County Iron Foundry Co., 209 N. Y. 207, 102 N. E. 598.

[b] The general conclusion, “to the great injury, annoyance and common nuisance of all the citizens of the state,” etc., does not supply the defect in the main body of the allegation. State v. Houck, 73 Ind. 37.

W. 467, objection was made to the indictment because it did not contain the words “to the common nuisance of all good citizens of the commonwealth residing in the neighborhood or passing by,” or other words of similar import, and the court held that as the acts stated in the indictment in themselves constituted a nuisance, and they were set out in the manner and with the degree of certainty required by the code, that the omission of the words quoted did not render the indictment defective.

2. Evidence.—Questions of evidence are fully treated in another work.⁵¹

3. Questions of Fact.⁵²—Whether the state of facts complained of amounts to a nuisance is a question for the jury,⁵³ unless the same amounts to a nuisance per se, in which case it is the duty of the court to so declare it.⁵⁴

D. SENTENCE AND JUDGMENT.⁵⁵—Under the rules of the common law a sentence of fine or imprisonment or both was the usual penalty for maintaining a nuisance.⁵⁶ Statutes provide similar penalties.⁵⁷

I. DEFINITION AND GENERAL STATEMENT.—A plea of nul tiel record literally means "no such record."¹

Scope of and Issue Raised by Plea.—Nul tiel record is the proper plea to an action founded upon a record,² and puts in issue the existence of the record;³ matters of special defense cannot be shown under

1. Cyclopedic Law Dict., 640.

2. 6 STANDARD PROC. 488; 7 STANDARD PROC. 64, 76.

[a] Defects appearing on the face of the record may be taken advantage of upon its production under a plea of nul tiel record. U. S.—Hill v. Mendenhall, 21 Wall. 453, 22 L. ed. 616. Ill.—Bank of Eau Claire v. Reed, 232 Ill. 238, 83 N. E. 820, 122 Am. St. Rep. 66, want of jurisdiction. N. Y.—Hoffheimer v. 3. 6 STANDARD PROC. 488; 7 STANDARD PROC. 76; 16 STANDARD PROC. 380.

As proper plea to put in issue the existence of (1) a domestic judgment (see 16 STANDARD PROC. 379; also 6 STANDARD PROC. 489); (2) a judgment of a court of a sister state (see 16 STANDARD PROC. 400; also 6 STANDARD PROC. 489; 7 STANDARD PROC. 65); (3) of a foreign judgment (see 7 STANDARD PROC. 65; 16 STANDARD PROC. 412); (4) of judgments of a court not of record (see 7 STANDARD PROC. 65); (5) of a decree in equity, see 16 STANDARD PROC. 402.

In an action on a bond the breach assigned being a failure to pay a judg-

a plea of nul tiel record, however.⁴

A general denial, under the code system of pleading, is equivalent to a plea of nul tiel record.⁵

II. CONCLUSION OF PLEA.—As a plea of nul tiel record raises a question for the court,⁶ it should conclude with a verification, and not to the country,⁷ unless charged by statute.⁸

III. TRIAL UPON ISSUE FORMED.—The old plea of nul tiel record creates an issue to be determined by the court on an inspection and examination of the record.⁹ Such a plea raises no issue to be determined by the jury,¹⁰ unless the statute provides otherwise.¹¹ In fact the issue raised should be determined by the court before the jury is sworn,¹² or at least before any issue is submitted to them.¹³ Such plea is met by the production of the record itself valid upon its face,¹⁴ or by an exemplification duly authenticated.¹⁵

ment, nul tiel record is a proper plea to test the existence of the judgment. See 4 STANDARD PROC. 515.

obtaining a ruling of the court,² and when the court acts the error is preserved by an exception to its ruling.³ A demurrer is an objection to a pleading;⁴ and exceptions as a means of testing the sufficiency of pleadings are recognized in equity,⁵ under the civil law,⁶ and by statute.⁷

II. NECESSITY FOR OBJECTIONS AND EXCEPTIONS.—In order to obtain appellate review of errors, except as to substantial matters appearing in the record proper, objections must be made and exceptions taken and made to appear by bill of exceptions.⁸

III. ENLARGEMENT OF ISSUES BY FAILURE TO OBJECT TO EVIDENCE.—The failure to object to the admission of evidence bearing on an issue not made by the pleadings will not authorize an adjudication of that issue, when the evidence is relevant to other issues made by the pleadings. But it is otherwise where the evidence would not be admissible if objected to.⁹ In the latter case instructions

[a] "An exception is but the formula of dissent from a ruling, expressed with sufficient clearness and definiteness to raise some concrete point upon appeal. This dissent, and the intention to question the ruling thereafter, are usually expressed by the phrase, 'I except.' The right of review, however, is not lost merely because this technical phrase does not happen to be employed. Any other clear expression will suffice, provided such expression be adequate to convey the idea which underlies all exceptions. That idea is nonassent and non-submission to the ruling." *Snelling v. I. INDICTMENT OR INFORMATION.¹—A. OBSCENITY GENERALLY.—1. Under Statute.—In accordance with the general rules of charging statutory offenses,² an indictment or information charging obscenity under a statute defining the offense is sufficient if it substantially follows the language of the statute or its equivalent.³ Generally, however, the indictment or information must disclose the existence of the facts which the statute makes necessary to constitute the offense.⁴ But where the offense is indictable under the common law an indictment, though insufficient under a statute, will not be quashed, where it meets the requirements of the common law.⁵

2. At Common Law.—An indictment or information which charges obscenity under the common law must contain a specific statement of the acts and conduct alleged to constitute the offense.⁶ An averment that the acts charged are contrary to the statute is mere surplusage and does not vitiate the indictment or information.⁷

B. UTTERING OBSCENE LANGUAGE.—1. Words Spoken.—While it is not necessary to set out in the indictment or information the whole conversation in which the use of the obscene language occurred,⁸ enough of the language should be averred to show that the offense has been committed.⁹ Where the offense of uttering obscene language in the presence of a female is charged and the language is not obscene or licentious per se, it must be shown by extrinsic averments that the language was used in an obscene sense and that the female so under-

2. Words Written.¹³ — Where it is intended to charge defendant with the use of obscene language in writing, it is necessary to allege the writing,¹⁴ and describe it.¹⁵

3. Place of Commission of Offense. — Under a statute defining the offense as the use of obscene language in a public place, it is essential to show in the indictment that the offense was committed in a public place.¹⁶ Where a statute prohibits the use of language in the presence of another tending to cause a breach of the peace, it must appear from the indictment that the language was uttered in the presence of the person of whom they were spoken.¹⁷

4. Common Nuisance. — Where the use of obscene language is charged as a common law offense, it must be averred in the indictment that the language was uttered in the hearing of various persons,¹⁸ and that it constituted a common nuisance.¹⁹

C. PUBLISHING AND DISTRIBUTING OBSCENE MATTER. — 1. Description Thereof. — An indictment or information charging the offense of publishing obscene matter must specifically describe the obscene language of the publication,²⁰ unless it is averred that the publication is so obscene that it cannot be properly spread upon the court's record.²¹

Although such averment is made, the indictment is nevertheless insufficient, unless it describes the publication in general terms so that it can be clearly identified,²² and its obscene character can be discerned.²³ It is not necessary, however, to set out the particulars in which the obscenity consists.²⁴ Where the prosecution is under a statute, an indictment substantially following the language of the statute is held sufficient without a specific description of the obscene publication.²⁵

2. Knowledge of Obscenity.—In accordance with the general rule, if a statute makes knowledge on the part of the defendant of the indecency of the publication an essential element of the offense, it must be averred that the published matter was obscene to the knowledge of defendant.²⁶ Where under the statute knowledge is not a necessary element of the offense, it need not be averred, however.²⁷

3. Criminal Intent.—Where criminal intent is not part of the statutory definition of the offense of publishing obscene matter, such intent need not be averred in the indictment.²⁸ But where the statute prohibits the distributing of obscene matter with an unlawful purpose, the indictment is not sufficient unless such purpose is alleged.²⁹

4. Publication and Distribution.—In an indictment for publishing obscene matter, it is not necessary to allege the place of publication.³⁰ Nor is it necessary to allege to whom it was sold.³¹ Where the statute characterizes the obscene publication as designed to corrupt the morals of youth, the indictment must show the manner of its publication.³²

[a] Sufficient Averment.—(1) An allegation that the defendant knowingly distributed (State v. Ulsemer, 24 Wash. 657, 64 Pac. 800), (2) or knowingly offered for sale (State v. Hol-edger, 15 Wash. 443, 46 Pac. 652) an obscene publication sufficiently charges the defendant with knowledge of its obscene character.

Where the statute prohibits the distribution of printed matter containing obscene language, the manner of distribution must be alleged in the indictment,³³ although it is not necessary to allege the circumstances attending the printing and publishing thereof.³⁴

D. INDECENT EXPOSURE. — 1. Under Statute. — According to the general rule of charging statutory offenses,³⁵ an indictment or information for the offense of indecent exposure which substantially follows the language of the statute or its equivalent is sufficient.³⁶ Where the statute requires an exposure in public or in a public place the accusation must set forth such an exposure,³⁷ but need not show that the exposure was made in the actual sight of any person.³⁸ Nor is it necessary to state to whom the defendant exposed his person.³⁹

2. At Common Law. — An indictment charging indecent exposure under the common law must show that it took place in public and was capable of being seen by more than one person,⁴⁰ and must allege the criminal intent.⁴¹

E. OBSCENE EXHIBITION. — An indictment charging the offense of exhibiting an obscene picture need not specifically describe wherein

[b] Where the statute requires the exhibition to be "willfully and lewdly" made, an indictment charging that it was "unlawfully and willfully" made, omitting the word "lewdly" is insufficient. Stark v. State, 81 Miss. 397, 33 So. 175.

37. See notes following.

[a] On a Public Road.—Where the statute prohibits indecent exposure "in public" it is not sufficient to allege that the defendant did make an obscene exhibition of his person on a public road. Williams v. State, 64 Ind. 553, 31 Am. Rep. 135; Moffit v. State, 43 Tex. 346.

[b] But an allegation that the offense was committed in a public place, viz., a blacksmith shop, sufficiently shows the public character of the place where the crime was committed. Lorimer v. State, 76 Ind. 495.

[c] Exposure in Presence of One Person.—Where the indictment charges that the accused publicly exposed his person in the presence of one named person but does not show that the exposure was in a public place or in any other place where it could have been seen by more than one person, a demurrer thereto must be sustained. Lockhart v. State, 116 Ga. 557, 42 S. E. 787.

[a] Criminal intent (1) is sufficiently shown by an averment that the indecent exposure was willfully done (State v. Burgess, 77 N. H. 170, 89 Atl. 452), or (2) for the purpose of corrupting the morals of the people. Com. v. Haynes, 2 Gray (Mass.) 72, 61 Am. Dec. 437.

the obscenity consisted;⁴² but the exhibition should be sufficiently described to show that it constituted the offense charged.⁴³

F. JOINDER OF PARTIES.⁴⁴—Several persons cannot be jointly indicted for using obscene language.⁴⁵ But the offense of indecent exposure may be charged against several persons jointly where they agree in concert to do the acts constituting the crime.⁴⁶

II. TRIAL.⁴⁷—A. VARIANCE.—The general rules pertaining to variance⁴⁸ apply to prosecutions for obscenity.⁴⁹ So a variance in reference to the place where the offense is alleged to have been committed,⁵⁰ or in the description of the obscene act⁵¹ is fatal.

B. PROVINCE OF COURT AND JURY.—The general rule that questions of fact are for the jury obtains in prosecutions for obscenity.⁵²

43. Knowles v. State, 3 Day (Conn.) 103.

[a] An averment that the defendant exhibited an obscene painting for money is sufficient without an averment that the defendant published such painting. Com. v. Sharpless, 2 Serg. & R. (Pa.) 91, 7 Am. Dec. 632.

48. See the title "Variance and Failure of Proof."

49. See the following notes.

[a] Immaterial Variance.—Where obscene words are averred in the indictment to have been spoken, the variance is not material, if the words are substantially, though not exactly, proved as laid. Benson v. State, 68 Ala. 544; Bell v. State 1 Swan (Tenn.) 42.

50. Quin v. State, 65 Miss. 479, 4 So. 548.

[a] An averment that an obscene writing was posted on the dwelling house is not sustained by proof that such writing was left in an outhouse. Gober v. State, 140 Ala. 153, 37 So. 78.

51. Com. v. de Jardin, 126 Mass. 46, 30 Am. Rep. 652.

[a] Allegation of Painting Not Proved by Carving.—An allegation that a human head and ear were painted on a board is not sustained by proving that the head and ear were cut in the board and that no paint was used. State v. Powers, 34 N. C. 5.

[b] Obscene Exhibition Not Proved by Obscene Writing.—A charge that the defendant did in public make an obscene exhibition of the persons of others is not sustained by proof that the defendant placed obscene writing upon the clothes worn by other persons. Tucker v. State, 28 Tex. App. 541, 13 S. W. 1004.

52. See generally the title "Province of Judge and Jury," and the following notes.

[a] Thus, whether the language (1) imputed to the defendant (Carter v. State, 107 Ala. 146, 18 So. 232), or (2) the publication alleged to have been distributed by him (United States v. Clarke, 38 Fed. 500), (3) is obscene ordinarily is to be determined by the jury under appropriate instructions of the court, though there is authority to the contrary. McNair v. People, 89 Ill. 441; Smith v. State, 24 Tex. App. 1, 5 S. W. 510. (4) The questions as to whether the language used was calculated to cause a breach of the peace (Moore v. State, 50 Ark. 25, 6 S. W. 17), or (5) whether the act charged was committed publicly (Gunn v. Territory, 19 Okla. 240, 91 Pac. 861), or (6) whether the defendant sold the alleged obscene publication (State v. McKee, 73 Conn. 18, 46 Atl. 409, 84 Am. St. Rep. 124, 49 L. R. A. 542; Com. v. Dowling, 14 Pa. Co. Ct. 607), or (7) whether it was designed by defendant to corrupt the public morals (Smith v. State, 24 Tex. App. 1, 5 S. W. 510), likewise are questions of fact to be decided by the jury from all the circumstances of the case, (8) but where it is admitted that the publication was of a certain character, the court may determine as a matter of law whether that class of printed matter comes within the statutory definition of obscenity. State v. McKee, 73 Conn. 18, 46 Atl. 409, 84 Am. St. Rep. 124, 49 L. R. A. 542.

[b] The question whether a picture or publication is obscene falls within the range of ordinary intelligence and the jury is not required to be informed by an expert before finding its verdict. People v. Muller, 96 N. Y. 408, 48 Am. Rep. 635, 2 N. Y. Crim. 375.

53. See 13 STANDARD PROC. 698, et seq.

54. See the following notes.

[a] Thus (1) the court is not required to define at length the meaning of the term "obscene" as it may be assumed to be understood in its common meaning by the jury. Com. v. Buckley, 200 Mass. 346, 86 N. E. 910, 128 Am. St. Rep. 425, 22 L. R. A. (N. S.) 225. (2) But the court may instruct the jury as to the principles by which they are to be guided in determining the guilt of the defendant. State v. McKee, 73 Conn. 18, 46 Atl. 409, 84 Am. St. Rep. 124, 49 L. R. A. 542.

[b] The court should not assume in its instructions facts not in evidence. State v. Andrews, 35 Ore. 388, 58 Pac. 765.

[c] An essential element of the offense alleged to have been committed by the defendant should not be omitted from the charge. Stark v. State, 81 Miss. 397, 33 So. 175.

[d] Presumptions. Where the instructions actually given by the court are not disclosed by the record it may be presumed that such instructions covered the defendant's requests so far as they stated the law correctly. Andrews v. United States, 162 U. S. 420, 16 Sup. Ct. 798, 40 L. ed. 1023.

I. INDICTMENT OR INFORMATION.¹—A. IN GENERAL.—All the facts and circumstances material to the crime of obstructing justice as defined by law should be set forth in the indictment or information,² with requisite certainty,³ and with due regard to the rules against duplicity,⁴ and surplusage.⁵

The official character of the person obstructed must be shown,⁶ and where knowledge⁷ or intent⁸ are ingredients of the offense they must

[a] If it appears upon the face of an indictment charging the offense of resisting an officer of the United States in the performance of his duty in serving a writ, that the person resisted was not an officer of the United States, it must be quashed on motion. United States v. Mullin, 71 Fed. 682.

[b] A general allegation, however, that the person resisted was a public officer authorized to execute the process is sufficient. United States v. Mullin, 71 Fed. 682; Bowers v. People, 17 Ill. 373.

[c] From a description of the officer the power to execute the process may be inferable; in such case it is not necessary to aver that the officer was duly authorized to serve the process. State v. Cassady, 52 N. H. 500 (sheriff); State v. Pickett, 118 N. C. 1231, 24 S. E. 350, police officer.

23. State v. Sherburne, 59 N. H. 90; State v. Roberts, 52 N. H. 492.

3. Knowledge and Intent.—Knowledge of the official capacity of the person executing the process need not be averred,²⁴ unless such knowledge is an element of the offense under the statute.²⁵

Intent to impede the officer in the fulfillment of his duties should be set out where the prosecution is for an offense at common law;²⁶ but not, however, where the charge is based on a statute.²⁷

4. Acts of Resistance.—Resistance to the officer in the execution of the process should be shown.²⁸ An allegation in the language of the statute is sufficient;²⁹ and except, perhaps, in a few jurisdictions,³⁰ the particular acts or mode of obstruction need not be detailed.³¹

C. RESISTING ARREST.—1. In General.—In charging the offense of resisting arrest, it is necessary to state whether the arrest was being sought with or without a warrant,³² the county where the offense was committed;³³ and that the resistance was made in order to impede

[a] It is sufficient to charge the assault as made upon the officer, he being in the due execution of his office. State v. Dunn, 109 N. C. 839, 13 S. E. 881.

[b] It has been held insufficient to aver merely that the officer resisted was engaged in the due execution of his office. Jones v. State, 60 Ala. 99; State v. Johnson, 42 La. Ann. 559, 7 So. 588.

[c] Possession of the process by the officer should appear either by express averment or by implication from the language used. State v. Bushey, 95 Me. 151, 51 Atl. 872; State v. Fifield, 18 N. H. 34.

[d] The place where the writ was delivered to the officer need not be averred. State v. Hooker, 17 Vt. 658.

[e] Where an officer's assistant (1) is impeded in the service of process, it need not be alleged that such person was requested by the officer to aid him. State v. Emery, 65 Vt. 464, 27 Atl. 167. (2) Nor need it be averred that such assistance was necessary, if it appears from the indictment that the defendant knew that the person resisted was assisting the officer. State v. Emery, 65 Vt. 464, 27 Atl. 167.

[a] Under a statute using the word "willfully" in defining the offense of obstruction of justice, it must be shown that the defendant knew that his act would have the effect of obstructing an officer in the performance of his duties. Ratcliff v. State, 12 Okla. Crim. 448, 158 Pac. 293.

the attempted arrest.³⁴ But the name of the person arrested need not be alleged,³⁵ nor the manner in which the officer was attempting to discharge his duty.³⁶

If the crime is that of resisting arrest under warrant, the nature of the warrant,³⁷ and its legality,³⁸ must be averred. Neither the offense named in the warrant,³⁹ nor the elements constituting such offense,⁴⁰ need be set forth in the indictment. Nor is it necessary to aver that the officer had the warrant in his possession,⁴¹ or that the accused obstructed the officer at the time of the alleged attempt by him to execute the warrant.⁴² Where it appears that the arrest was being made without warrant, it must also be shown that no warrant was necessary.⁴³

2. Authority of Officer.—It must appear from the indictment or information that the officer who endeavored to make the arrest was authorized to do so.⁴⁴ It has been held, however, that a charge that the arrest or attempt to arrest was made by a deputy sheriff,⁴⁵ or an officer or constable of a certain county,⁴⁶ imports that such officer was authorized to make the arrest.

3. Knowledge of Authority.—Unless the statute makes knowledge of the official character of the person resisting an element⁴⁷ of the Doherty*, 103 Mass. 443, where it is held that an indictment in which it is alleged that the defendant was arrested by a police officer under a warrant from a magistrate particularly described without a statement that the officer was authorized to make the arrest or that the arrest was lawful is not sufficient.

[b] An allegation that the defendant well knew that the person resisted offense, such knowledge need not be pleaded.⁴⁸

4. Acts of Resistance.—The particular acts of resistance of an officer engaged in the execution of a warrant of arrest, as a rule, need not be averred.⁴⁹

D. REFUSAL TO AID IN EXECUTION OF PROCESS.—An indictment or information charging defendant with a refusal to aid an officer in the execution of his duties when called upon to do so must show that the officer had authority to act in the premises,⁵⁰ and that the defendant was informed of the official character of the officer.⁵¹

Charging several defendants with failing to obey the summons of an officer to aid him, where the offense of each arises out of some personal duty or omission is fatally defective.⁵²

E. DISSUADING OR INTERFERING WITH WITNESS.—The indictment or information must show a pending cause wherein the witness was required to testify;⁵³ the name of the witness;⁵⁴ and knowledge on the part of defendant that such person was sought as a witness;⁵⁵ the character of the process;⁵⁶ and where required by statute,⁵⁷ but not otherwise,⁵⁸ the fact that the witness had been duly summoned. It is not necessary to set out the method or means employed by the de-was a deputy sheriff shows that the defendant knew the official character of the officer at the time of the acts complained of. State v. Ferry, 61 Vt. 624, 18 Atl. 451.

defendant for the purpose of inducing the witness not to appear.⁵⁹ It is sufficient to set out the purpose and the resulting act so that the nature of the accusation is apparent therefrom.⁶⁰ An averment that the defendant did induce the witness to absent himself from the court is not indispensable.⁶¹

F. SUPPRESSING EVIDENCE.—It is essential to a charge of suppressing evidence that the accused had knowledge of the fact that the evidence would be required.⁶²

G. FAILURE OR REFUSAL TO RESPOND TO PROCESS.—Under a statute denouncing the offense of refusing to attend and testify as a witness in a criminal cause, the indictment or information must show that a criminal action was pending in which defendant was required to testify;⁶³ and must contain a description of the subpoena and its service.⁶⁴ But an indictment in the language of the statute which describes the facts constituting the offense is sufficient.⁶⁵

II. TRIAL.⁶⁶—A. VARIANCE.—The general rules in reference to variance are applicable to prosecutions for obstructing justice.⁶⁷ Thus, an immaterial variance between the averments of the indictment or information and the proof will not be fatal.⁶⁸ It is otherwise as State v. Bringgold, 40 Wash. 12, 82 Pac. 132.

59. State v. Sills, 85 Kan. 830, 118 Pac. 867.

60. State v. Ames, 64 Me. 386; Brown v. State, 13 Tex. App. 358.

[a] An indictment charging that the defendant gave money to a third person for the purpose of inducing a witness to absent himself from the court is not sufficient unless it is shown that the witness himself was communicated with. State v. Baller, 26 W. Va. 90, 53 Am. Rep. 66.

61. State v. Biebusch, 32 Mo. 276, as the offense may consist in an attempt to impede the due course of justice.

62. Southern Express Co., v. Com. 167 Ky. 460, 180 S. W. 839.

63. State v. Clancy, 56 Vt. 698, an allegation that the defendant was called to give evidence of what he knew in relation to all matter to be investigated by the grand jury is not in legal effect an allegation that any criminal cause was to be investigated by the grand jury.

64. Drake v. State, 60 Ala. 62.

65. Batre v. State, 18 Ala. 119.

66. See generally the title "Trial."

67. See infra, this section, and generally the title "Variance and Failure of Proof."

68. See infra, this note.

[a] Thus (1) where the warrant is set forth in the indictment in hæc verba, a mere literal variance between the warrant offered in evidence and that described will not vitiate the indictment. Mo.—State v. Estis, 70 Mo. 427, "fales" pretenses instead of false pretenses. (2) And where the indictment describes the warrant of arrest as issued on a complaint for larceny to be heard in the police court and the proof shows that the warrant was for larceny committed in another state, the variance is not material. Com. v. Tracy, 5 Mete. (Mass.) 536. (3) Nor is it a fatal variance that the proof under an indictment charging the offense of resisting arrest ordered by a judicial warrant of arrest shows that the attempted arrest was made under a writ issued by a county judge. State v. Freeman, 8 Iowa 428, 74 Am. Dec. 317. (4) So also where an indictment for resisting an officer in the discharge of his duties incorrectly designates the name of such officer (Ala.—Cooley v. State, 7 Ala. App. 163, 62 So. 292. Ia.—State v. Flynn, 42 Iowa 164. Mass.—Com. v. Beckley, 3 Mete. 330), or (5) the office he occupied. State v. Pickett, 118 N. C. 1231, 24 S. E. 350. See Lewis v. State, 3 Ala. App. 133, 57 So. 1035, the variance is not fatal. (6) And proof of resistance to a person appointed by an officer to act for him is competent under the

to a material variance therein, however.⁶⁹

B. PROVINCE OF JUDGE AND JURY.⁷⁰ — The question of the sufficiency of a process, the execution of which had been obstructed, is to be determined by the court.⁷¹ But whether the defendant knew of the official character of the person resisted,⁷² or whether the officer informed the defendant of his intention to arrest him and of the offense he is charged with,⁷³ are questions for the jury. The intention of the defendant in offering a witness compensation and persuading him not to obey a subpoena likewise is a question of fact to be determined by the jury from all the facts and circumstances of the case.⁷⁴

C. INSTRUCTIONS in prosecutions for obstructing justice are governed by general rules governing instructions,⁷⁵ such as that instructions assuming the existence of facts which were not proven,⁷⁶ or as to which the evidence is conflicting,⁷⁷ are properly refused.

D. VERDICT. — The general rules governing verdicts obtain in such prosecutions.⁷⁸ allegations of an indictment charging resistance to an officer. United States v. McDonald, 8 Biss. 439, 26 Fed. Cas. No. 15,667. (7) An averment that the defendant induced a witness to absent himself and proof that no force was used by him constitutes no variance. State v. Sills, 85 Kan. 830, 118 Pac. 867.

69. See infra, this note.

[a] Thus (1) where the office occupied by the officer is described in the indictment with particularity, proof that the officer did not occupy such position constitutes a material variance. United States v. Phelps, 4 Day 469, 27 Fed. Cas. No. 16,041. (2) So where it is alleged that the officer was legally appointed and duly qualified, the failure to show that he was so appointed and qualified creates a fatal variance. State v. Copp, 15 N. H. 212.

(a) The court is not required to instruct on a lesser offense than the one charged, where no request for such an instruction is made. People v. De Meaux, 194 Mich. 18, 160 N. W. 634.

[b] Erroneous Instructions on One Count.—(1) Where an information charging resistance of an officer while serving process consists of two counts and the defendant is convicted on the first count, it is not material that the court erred in its instructions on the second count. Witherspoon v. State, 42 Tex. Crim. 532, 61 S. W. 396, 96 Am. St. Rep. 812. (2) And where the offense of interfering with a witness is charged in two counts and the jury finds a verdict of guilty as to both counts the judgment will be affirmed, although the court erred in its instructions as to one of the counts. Charles v. United States, 213 Fed. 717. 130 C. C. A. 231.

77. Johnson v. State, 51 Fla. 44, 40 So. 678.

78. See infra, this note and generally the title "Verdict."

I. VENUE.¹ — A. GENERALLY. — The general rule is that a prosecution for obtaining property by false pretenses must be brought in the jurisdiction where the property is actually obtained.² A prosecution for an attempt to obtain property by false pretenses must be brought in the jurisdiction where the attempt is made.³

B. WHEN PROPERTY DELIVERED TO CARRIER OR MAILED. — Where as a result of the false pretenses of the defendant, property has been delivered to a carrier for transportation to the defendant, the venue must be laid in the jurisdiction where such delivery was made, the carrier being regarded as the agent of the consignee.⁴ Generally where property is mailed to the defendant he should be indicted at the place of mailing.⁵ But where an instrument for the payment of money is sent through the mail to the defendant, there is some confusion in the authorities as to where the venue should be laid.⁶

II. INDICTMENT OR INFORMATION. — A. GENERALLY. — Generally speaking an indictment for obtaining property by false pretenses must aver all of the material facts necessary to be proven in order to convict; and that the pretenses were false in fact and induced the owner to part with his property.⁷ Describing the acts of the defendant in the language of the statute as "false pretenses" is sufficient.⁸

Surplusage will be disregarded.⁹ The indictment will not be quashed for want of precision or redundancy when it can be seen from the entire instrument that the charge plainly appears.¹⁰

B. PARTICULAR ALLEGATIONS. — 1. Jurisdictional Matters. — The time and place of obtaining the property should be set forth in the indictment.¹¹

2. The Pretenses. — a. Generally. — The indictment should set forth the alleged false pretenses with such certainty and precision as the false pretenses are contained in a letter mailed in one jurisdiction and the money is obtained by means of a draft or check drawn upon a bank in another jurisdiction, which is deposited by the defendant in a bank in the former jurisdiction, the venue is properly laid in such former jurisdiction. State v. Smith, 162 Iowa 336, 144 N. W. 32, 49 L. R. A. (N. S.) 834. See Dechard v. State (Tex. Crim.), 57 S. W. 813; also People v. Hoffmann, 142 Mich. 531, 105 N. W. 838. it seems, the very nature of the pretenses set forth implies that the party making them must have known them to be false.²⁵

5. That False Pretense Was Inducement.—The indictment must aver that the person alleged to have been defrauded relied upon the false pretenses and that the property was obtained by reason thereof;²⁶

Indictment for an attempt need not allege that the fraud was completed.³⁵

7. Description of Party Defrauded.—The general rule is that in the absence of any statutory provision the indictment or information must state the name of the person alleged to have been defrauded by the false representations of the defendant,³⁶ or excuse the failure to set forth the name;³⁷ but where the party defrauded is a corporation, it is sufficient to allege that the pretense was made to the corporation without naming any particular individual.³⁸ If it be charged that property of one person was obtained by false representations made to another person, the indictment is insufficient where agency or other relation between such persons is not alleged;³⁹ and where the charge is that a concern or firm was defrauded, the indictment must state whether it is a corporation, partnership, joint-stock company, or voluntary association.⁴⁰ In several jurisdictions there are statutory provisions that in an indictment for this offense it is sufficient to charge the act to have been done with an intent to defraud without alleging an intent to defraud any particular person. In such states the name of the person defrauded need not be set forth.⁴¹

An indictment for conspiracy to defraud by false pretenses need not specify the person or persons who were the objects of the conspiracy, and who were to be cheated and defrauded in the prosecution thereof.⁴²

cuse for the omission.⁴⁹ This rule applies to an indictment for an attempt to obtain property by false pretenses.⁵⁰ Some courts hold that a direct allegation of ownership is not necessary; it is sufficient if the ownership of the property appears from the entire indictment.⁵¹

C. PLEADING WRITTEN INSTRUMENTS OR PAPERS.⁵²—According to some authorities whenever a written instrument is the basis of the offense of obtaining property by false pretenses, such instrument should be set out in haec verba in the indictment or information,⁵³ or if for some reason this is impossible, such reason should be stated and the [c] Where the property is obtained from copartners, it is sufficient to allege ownership in any one of the partners. Gardner v. State, 4 Ala. App. 131, 58 So. 1001.

[d] But under the statutes of some states (1) it is not necessary to allege the ownership of the property. See the statutes, and State v. Ridge, 125 N. C. 658, 34 S. E. 440. substance of the instrument set forth.⁵⁴ In other jurisdictions, it is not necessary to set out the written instrument in full; it is sufficient to set out the purport of it.⁵⁵

D. ELECTION AND SEVERAL COUNTS.—The general rules as to the use of several counts to meet the various phases of the evidence apply to indictments for obtaining property by false pretenses.⁵⁶ The same is true of the rules governing elections.⁵⁷

E. JOINDER OF SEVERAL OFFENDERS.—Several persons who participated in the making of the false pretenses and who obtained the property may be jointly charged in an indictment.⁵⁸

F. JOINDER OF OFFENSES.⁵⁹—Counts charging the obtaining of property by false pretenses and larceny from the same person,⁶⁰ or for obtaining property by false pretenses and embezzlement of the same property,⁶¹ may be joined in a single indictment or information. Con-

[a] If the written instrument is only a step in the transaction, or an incident of the offense, a particular description of the same is not necessary. State v. Baker, 57 Kan. 541, 46 Pac. 947.

[b] But (1) if some question turns on the form or construction of the instrument (State v. Tatum, 96 Miss. 430, 50 So. 490), (2) or a legal description of it is given in the indictment, the accuracy of which may be material for the court to determine (State v. Tatum, 96 Miss. 430, 50 So. 490) it should be set forth in haec verba.

56. See generally 12 STANDARD PROC. 536, et seq.

[a] Thus (1) it may be alleged in one count that the pretenses were made to a firm, and in another count that they were made to the individual members of the firm. Oliver v. State, 37 Ala. 134. (2) An indictment containing two counts, one charging the defendant with obtaining property under false pretenses and the other with obtaining the signature to a note by false pretenses, both having reference to the same transaction, is proper. State v. House, 55 Iowa 466, 8 N. W. 307, both might have been charged in a single count.

57. See generally 12 STANDARD PROC. 670, et seq.

61. State v. Lincoln, 49 N. H. 464, but the court will take care not only spiracy to obtain property by false pretenses and the obtaining of the same property by false pretenses may be charged in separate counts of an indictment.⁶²

III. TRIAL.⁶³—A. ISSUES AND VARIANCE.—On the trial of an indictment for obtaining goods by false pretenses, the prosecution will be confined in the proof to the pretenses set forth in the indictment;⁶⁴ but all the pretenses charged need not be proved; it is sufficient that proof be made of one material and inducing pretense.⁶⁵

The general rules as to variance apply to prosecutions for obtaining property by false pretenses.⁶⁶ So, a material variance between the allegations of the indictment or information and the proof is fatal;⁶⁷ that the defendant is not convicted of two offenses upon the same indictment, but also that he is not embarrassed in the presentation of his defense; and if it appear to the court during the course of the trial that the different offenses charged do not relate to the same transaction, the court may, at any stage of the proceedings, put the prosecutor to his election, or quash the indictment.

W. 1019, no variance between proof that money obtained from bank by opening an account by depositing an order on a fictitious firm in another state and later checking it out, and the charge that defendant received money for the draft.

[a] No Variance.—An allegation in an indictment, that the defendant obtained goods of A., B. and C., partners in trade, by false pretenses made to them, is supported by proof that the defendant made the alleged false pretenses to their clerk and salesmen, who communicated them to B., and that the goods were delivered to the defendant in consequence of those false pretenses. *Com. v. C. INSTRUCTIONS.—The court should properly instruct the jury on the law affecting the case in accordance with the general rules as to instructions.⁷³

D. VERDICT.—The verdict in a prosecution for obtaining property by false pretenses is governed in the main by the general rules.⁷⁴ Where the jury in their verdict specify one element of the crime and omit other essential elements, it is insufficient to sustain a conviction.⁷⁵ That the jury in their verdict undertook to name the offense and styled it "obtaining money by false pretenses," instead of "false pretenses,"⁷⁶ or to state the value of the property obtained,⁷⁷ is immaterial.

action can ordinarily be maintained against an officer for an improper exercise of discretion involved in the performance of a public duty.⁷

C. CONDITIONS PRECEDENT. — Where the statute requires notice to the officer prior to suit, it must be given;⁸ otherwise notice is not necessary.⁹

D. VENUE.¹⁰ — Statutes sometimes provide that an action against a public officer, for any act done by him in virtue of his office, must be tried in the county where the cause of action, or some part thereof, arose.¹¹

E. PARTIES.¹² — In the absence of an express statute, an officer cannot sue in his own name in his official capacity, but actions must be instituted by him either in the name of the corporate body which he represents,¹³ or in his name, with the title of his office added thereto.¹⁴

Proceedings against officers on official bonds are properly instituted in the name of the state.¹⁵

Where the damage is caused by the joint act of several officers, they may be sued jointly.¹⁶

F. PLEADING. — In a declaration or complaint against an officer for some act arising out of a breach of duty, the duty on the part of the officer must be averred,¹⁷ together with facts showing a breach of such

II. ACTIONS FOR RECOVERY OF STATUTORY PENALTY.²²

Under some statutes, parties injured by the acts of an officer may recover in an action for a penalty.²³

The complaint in such an action must show every fact necessary to inform the court that the action comes within the purview of the statute.²⁴

III. ACTIONS AND PROCEEDINGS ON OFFICER'S BONDS.²⁵

A. GENERALLY.—Injuries resulting from improper performance of official duties may be remedied by an action against the officer and his sureties on the official bond;²⁶ and successive actions may be brought on the bond until the damages for the various breaches aggregate the amount of the penalty thereof.²⁷

Prerequisites to Action. — Prior demand upon the officer before bringing an action on his bond is sometimes,²⁸ but not always,²⁹ necessary.³⁰ Leave of court to sue need not be obtained;³¹ nor is it necessary to establish by suit the liability of the principal before an action against the sureties on the bond may be brought.³²

B. JURISDICTION AND VENUE.³³ — If the action on the bond is penal in its nature and concerns only the internal policy of the state, it cannot be brought in another state.³⁴

C. PARTIES.³⁵ — 1. Generally. — An action on the officer's bond may be brought in the name of the party aggrieved,³⁶ unless the statute requires it to be instituted in the name of the people for the use of the party,³⁷ or by an officer designated to bring such suits in his official capacity.³⁸

2. Joinder of Parties. — The principal and sureties on the bond may be sued either jointly,³⁹ or severally.⁴⁰

ciency of the complaint or declaration may be urged by demurrer,⁴⁷ or by motion to make more definite and certain.⁴⁸

E. JUDGMENT.⁴⁹—The judgment usually is for the penalty of the bond, to be discharged upon payment of the amount found due from the principal on the bond.⁵⁰ Where the statute provides that persons severally liable on an obligation may be sued jointly or severally, the fact that an action is brought against the principal and sureties on a bond does not prevent the rendition of a judgment against the defendants severally.⁵¹ In the absence of a statute authorizing a several judgment on a joint obligation, no judgment can be rendered for the plaintiff if any one of the defendants is not liable on the bond.⁵²

Interest may be allowed from the time of defalcation where the action against the officer is brought upon that ground.⁵³ And where an officer failed to account for and pay over moneys interest may be allowed from the time when his obligation matured.⁵⁴

F. SUMMARY PROCEEDINGS.—In some jurisdictions, a judgment against the principal will authorize a summary judgment against the sureties,⁵⁵ and the statutes sometimes provide for a summary judgment on motion against a delinquent official and his sureties,⁵⁶ regardless of

IV. PROCEEDINGS TO TRY TITLE TO OFFICE. — A. GENERALLY. — Title to office cannot be tested in a collateral proceeding;⁶¹ resort must be had to the direct remedy provided by statute for that purpose.⁶² Moreover, it is a matter for the law courts;⁶³ a bill in equity will not lie to have the election declared invalid;⁶⁴ nor will equity determine the title to office in an injunction proceeding.⁶⁵ Mandamus as a remedy is treated elsewhere in this title.⁶⁶

B. PARTIES.⁶⁷ — Statutory actions to determine the title to a public office are ordinarily brought in the name of the state, upon the relation of one who claims a right to the office against the incumbent.⁶⁸ But in the absence of an adverse claimant, the action may be brought by the

V. MANDAMUS AGAINST OFFICERS.⁷³ — A. TO COMPEL PERFORMANCE OF DUTIES. — 1. Generally. — Mandamus is an appropriate remedy to compel the performance of a ministerial duty devolving upon an officer.⁷⁴ To authorize it there must be some officer or officers in being having the power and the duty to perform the act sought to be compelled;⁷⁵ and there must be a duty which the officer is obligated regularities in the removal will not authorize mandamus to compel reinstatement.⁴¹ But if the proceedings were illegal or fatally defective,⁴² or if the testimony wholly fails to support the charges made,⁴³ a reinstatement will be compelled.

If the officer unlawfully removed voluntarily abandons the office,⁴⁴ or waives the right to restoration,⁴⁵ the writ will be denied. So also, if subsequently charges are preferred against the relator, upon which he is lawfully removed, the writ will not be issued.⁴⁶

If the term of office for which a person is elected has expired,⁴⁷ or if the office has been abolished subsequent to the removal,⁴⁸ a mandamus to compel reinstatement of an officer illegally removed will be refused.

Where the writ cannot issue against the governor,⁴⁹ he cannot be compelled to reinstate officers whom he has removed.⁵⁰

b. Relator Must Be De Jure Officer.—To obtain relief, it is necessary that the relator be an officer de jure entitled to hold and exercise the office.⁵¹

B. AGAINST PERFORMANCE OF PARTICULAR ACTS.—1. Generally. When there is no question as to whether an officer has a right to hold and exercise the office,¹³ equity has jurisdiction to restrain officers from performing illegal ministerial acts under the warrant of their offices.¹⁴ And if an officer threatens to exercise powers not conferred upon the office,¹⁵ or to exercise the powers of his office in a territory or jurisdiction within which he is not authorized to act,¹⁶ an injunction is a proper remedy. But equity will not enjoin an officer from the performance of lawful acts,¹⁷ or exercise supervisory jurisdiction over public officials in

IX. CRIMINAL PROSECUTION OF OFFICERS.—A. GENERALLY.—A public officer upon whom a ministerial duty is enjoined by law renders himself liable to criminal prosecution for a willful neglect to perform such duty.⁹² But a public officer is not subject to criminal prosecution for an act done by him in the exercise of discretion given him by law unless he acted corruptly,⁹³ or in excess of the powers conferred upon him.⁹⁴ A person who exercises the duties of a public office is equally liable to criminal prosecution as is an officer de jure.⁹⁵

An indictment, though not in the language of the statute, is sufficient if it contains every material and substantial fact required to complete the offense.⁹⁸ Where the definition of an offense whether it be at common law or by statute includes generic terms, it is not sufficient that the indictment shall charge the offense in the same generic terms as in the definition, but it must state the particulars.⁹⁹

Where several acts constitute but one offense, they may be alleged in one indictment, in accordance with the general rule of charging many acts constituting one offense.¹ The rule in reference to joinder of offenses restricting indictments to a single charge does not apply to accusations against officers charging corrupt misconduct in office.²

2. Particular Averments.—In an indictment charging an officer with neglect to perform an official act, his duty to perform such act must be alleged.³ The specific breach of duty constituting the offense charged must be distinctly averred.⁴ Where the charge is a violation of duty in neglecting to arrest parties for violating the law, there must be a specific averment that such parties were guilty of a violation of the law.⁵ If an officer is charged with the failure to account to his successor for public funds, it must affirmatively appear from the indictment that the term of office of the defendant had expired,⁶ and that the successor's term had begun;⁷ but it is not necessary to negative the loss of funds without defendant's fault.⁸ Where the charge is the approving of a false claim, it must be alleged that it was the defendant's done knowingly and from an improper motive, a charge in the language of the statute with proper specifications of the acts constituting the offense being sufficient. State v. Leeper, 146 N. C. 655, 61 S. E. 585. See generally 12 STANDARD PROC. 447 et seq. (3) But where the statute creating the offense does not specifically define or describe it, then the information or indictment must set out in full all acts of the defendant constituting the offense. State v. Ragsdale, 59 Mo. App. 590; State v. Kern, 51 N. J. L. 259, 17 Atl. 114. (4) The indictment need not negative the exceptions mentioned in the statute. State v. O'Gorman, 68 Mo. 179. duty to pass upon claims;⁹ and that such claims by reason of defendant's approval became a charge against the commonwealth.¹⁰ A charge of auditing illegal claims is insufficient unless it states facts showing the illegality of such claims.¹¹ In an indictment for corrupt misbehavior in office it must be distinctly charged that the act was done corruptly.¹² And where misconduct is charged it must allege that defendant acted willfully.¹³ An information charging the receipt of illegal fees must show that the fees were illegal,¹⁴ and were actually collected by defendant.¹⁵

I. ORDERS OR RULES TO SHOW CAUSE. — A. IN GENERAL. Although an order to show cause may be notice of a proceeding other than motion,¹ generally an order to show cause is simply a notice of motion, and a citation to the party to appear at a stated time and place and show cause why the motion of the applicant should not be granted.² In granting the order, the judge or court does not express

In injunction suits, an order to show cause may serve the purpose of a subpoena. See 13 STANDARD PROC. 116, 117.

In mandamus cases, see the title "Mandamus."

[a] On a proceeding to disbar an attorney, the complaining party may present the evidence relied on and if the court concludes in favor of the proceeding, it will direct a rule to show cause. Anonymous, 22 Wend. (N. Y.) 656. See also Winkelman v. People, 50 Ill. 449. As to disbarment proceedings generally, see 3 STANDARD PROC. 861.

2. McAuliffe v. Coughlin, 105 Cal. 268, 38 Pac. 730; Pitt v. Davison, 37 N. Y. 235, 3 Abb. Pr. (N. S.) 398, 34 How. Pr. 355; Thompson v. Erie R. Co., 9 Abb. Pr. N. S. (N. Y.) 233; People v. McLaughlin, 2 App. Div. 408, 37 N. Y. Supp. 998; Stryker v. Churchill, 39 Misc. 578, 80 N. Y. Supp. 588.

[a] The order (1) is merely a notice (Gray v. Gaither, 71 N. C. 55. See Halsey v. Van Wagenen, 16 N. J. L. 350; Crane v. Condit, 16 N. J. L. 349), (2) the purpose of which is to give notice for a shorter time than that prescribed by the statute generally. Goodrich v. Hopkins, 10 Minn. 162;

any opinion on the merits of the case.³

B. HOW OBTAINED. — An order to show cause is not granted as of course.⁴ It is generally granted upon an ex parte application or motion,⁵ made to the court or judge specified in the statute,⁶ and supported by an affidavit showing the grounds therefor,⁷ and any additional facts required by statute or rule of court.⁸

C. FORM AND CONTENTS.⁹ — The order should be entitled¹⁰ in the

[a] Matters Considered by the Court. — The court in passing on an application for an order to show cause, considers only the question whether there is a necessity for a notice shorter than the usual notice. Thompson v. Erie R. Co., 9 Abb. Pr. N. S. (N. Y.) 233.

[b] An order to show cause does not amount to a determination that the judge will make the order desired, unless the defendant show cause to the contrary. Gray v. Gaither, 71 N. C. 55. But compare Succession of Porter, 5 Rob. (La.) 96, holding that if the defendant fails to appear on the day specified, no judgment by default is necessary to make the rule absolute.

action in which it is granted, and be signed by the court or judge.¹¹ It should specify the grounds or irregularities on which the motion is based,¹² and should show the time¹³ and place¹⁴ at which it is returnable. It has been held that an order to show cause why a mandamus should not issue need not bear the teste¹⁵ or seal¹⁶ of the court.

D. SERVICE.—The service of an order to show cause must be made in compliance with any statutory regulations,¹⁷ and directions in the order itself.¹⁸ Generally there must be a service of a copy¹⁹ of the rule is properly in the name of the state.

[a] Where order is annexed to a notice of motion properly entitled in the cause, and it explicitly refers to such notice, it is sufficient. Paddock v. Palmer, 32 Misc. 426, 66 N. Y. Supp. 743.

11. Middlebrooks v. Warren, Wallace & Co., 59 Ga. 230, a signature "by the court, Hardeman & Johnsons, plaintiff's attorneys" is sufficient, especially where the rule absolute is signed by the judge himself.

12. Lewis v. Graham, 16 Abb. Pr. (N. Y.) 126; Van Dyke v. New York S. Banking Co., 18 Misc. 661, 43 N. Y. Supp. 735.

13. Ga.—King v. Carey, 5 Ga. 270. N. Y.—In re Ferris, 37 Misc. 606, 76 N. Y. Supp. 159. Wis.—Durbin v. Waldo, 15 Wis. 352, an order in the language of the statute providing for revival of actions against administrators is sufficient.

See Desler v. Burden, 1 Browne (Pa.) 220, holding if no time is stated, it is understood the rule is returnable to the next term.

[a] An order returnable in more than eight days is permissible under statute providing for an eight day notice, unless in an order to show cause the court directs less notice. In re Ferris, 37 Misc. 606, 76 N. Y. Supp. 159. See Vale v. Brooklyn Cross-Town R. Co., 12 Civ. Proc. (N. Y.) 102; also Gross v. Clark, 1 Civ. Proc. (N. Y.) 17, 25.

[b] May Be Noticed for First Day of Term.—Power v. Athens, 19 Hun (N. Y.) 165.

[c] An order to show cause containing a stay of proceedings is irregular where a rule of court requires at least two days' notice of stay orders. Asinari v. Volkening, 2 Abb. N. C. (N. Y.) 454.

15. Taylor v. Henry, 2 Pick. (Mass.) 397, it is not a writ or process within the meaning of the statute requiring a teste and seal.

16. Taylor v. Henry, 2 Pick. (Mass.) 397; People ex rel. Crouse v. Board of Supervisors, 70 Hun 560, 24 N. Y. Supp. 597.

17. Timolat v. S. J. Held Co., 15 Misc. 630, 37 N. Y. Supp. 221, 72 N. Y. St. 800, under statute requiring service at residence of attorney whose office is closed, and who has no office letter box. See generally the title "Service of Process and Papers."

[a] In Louisiana, no other citation than a notification of the rule to show cause is required. Succession of Porter, 5 Rob. (La.) 96.

[b] Copy of Answer.—In serving an order to show cause why the plaintiff should not be compelled to accept an answer served upon him, it is not necessary to deliver a copy of the answer where the answer has already been served. It is immaterial if the plaintiff has returned the answer. Paddock v. Palmer, 32 Misc. 426, 66 N. Y. Supp. 743.

18. Marcele v. Saltzman, 66 How. Pr. (N. Y.) 205, order requiring two days' service on the plaintiff's attorney on its face means personal service.

19. See notes below.

[a] Defects in the copy do not of themselves warrant a denial of the order, on the party ordered to show cause or his attorney,²⁰ made within the state,²¹ although personal service on the party himself is sometimes required.²²

E. HEARING AND DETERMINATION ON RETURN DAY.—The party ordered to show cause is bound to answer it on the day fixed.²³ But if he neglects to do so, the party obtaining the order is only entitled to the relief specified in the order.²⁴ And even where the application is opposed, it has been held that the final order should follow the rule to show cause.²⁵

F. OPENING AND VACATING ORDERS OR RULES TO SHOW CAUSE. Orders to show cause which are improperly granted may be vacated on proper application therefor.²⁶

G. APPEAL AND REVIEW.—An appeal will not lie from an order to show cause,²⁷ or from an order vacating an order to show cause,²⁸ because the former is in the nature of a notice of motion merely and because the latter is in the discretion of the court or judge. But if the order granted on the hearing of the order to show cause is a final order, an appeal will lie.²⁹

II. ORDERS ON MOTION AND BY CONSENT.—A. DEFINITIONS AND DISTINCTIONS.—An order has been defined to be a decision made during the progress of the cause, either prior or subsequent to motion. Harrison Mach. Wks. v. Hosig, 73 Wis. 184, 41 N. W. 70.

[b] An appearance to object to irregularities does not waive the defects. Wood v. Critchfield, 1 Comp. & M. (Eng.) 72, 3 Tyrw. 235.

25. Winkelman v. People, 50 Ill. 449.

[a] Under an alternative clause for other relief not specified, the court may, if the application is opposed, grant such further and other relief as the facts presented show the party is entitled to. Rogers v. Toole, 11 Paige (N. Y.) 212.

a final judgment, settling some points of practice or some question collateral to the main issue presented by the pleadings, and necessary to be disposed of before such issue can be passed upon by the court, or necessary to be determined in carrying into execution the final judgment.³⁰ The codes define an order to be every direction of a court or judge, made or entered in writing and not included in a judgment.³¹

The word "rule" and the word "order" are synonymous terms.³² But there is a wide distinction between an order and a direction for an order,³³ or between an order and an allocatur.³⁴ And strictly speaking, an order is not a judgment or decree,³⁵ although the terms are sometimes used somewhat indiscriminately.³⁶

30. Loring v. Illsley, 1 Cal. 24, quoted and characterized in McGuire v. Drew, 83 Cal. 225, 232, 23 Pac. 312, as a "correct definition."

[b] As distinguished from a final judgment, it is the judgment of a court upon any motion or proceeding. Cal. In re Rose, 80 Cal. 166, 22 Pac. 86; Gilman v. Contra Costa, 8 Cal. 52, 68 Am. B. KINDS OF ORDERS.—Orders may be by a court or judge,³⁷ may be on motion or by consent,³⁸ and may be final or interlocutory.³⁹

C. HOW OBTAINED.—Orders are obtained by consent or stipulation of the parties,⁴⁰ or by their application.⁴¹ If the court makes an order on its own motion without notice to the parties, its action is erroneous.⁴²

D. DRAWING UP OR PREPARATION.—Generally it is the duty of the clerk to prepare and enter orders in accordance with the decision of the court.⁴³ But sometimes this duty devolves upon the party or his attorney.⁴⁴

E. FORM OF ORDER.⁴⁵—1. Generally.—It is generally required that orders of a court or judge shall be in writing,⁴⁶ and signed by the court or judge.⁴⁷ Under a statute requiring an attestation of an order by the clerk, an order does not become effective for any purpose until so attested.⁴⁸

Title of Court and Cause. — Orders should be so designated that there can be no mistake as to the cause in which they are entered.⁴⁹ Accordingly they should have a caption,⁵⁰ stating truly the time and place, when and where made,⁵¹ the names of the parties,⁵² and if it is a court order, the term of court,⁵³ or if a judge's order, the name of the judge.⁵⁴

Short Form. — Some statutes provide for a short form of order, made by indorsing or appending the determination of the motion to the motion papers.⁵⁵

Morgan v. Whitesides' Curator, 14 La. 277, when entered in the minutes. Minn.—Leyde v. Martin, 16 Minn. 38, the entry in the minutes is sufficient evidence of the fact the order was made. Wis.—Baker v. Baker, 51 Wis. 538, 8 N. W. 289, holding parol evidence of making of order conclusive.

[b] Orders made in the progress of the trial need not be signed. State v. Judge, 12 La. Ann. 455.

[c] Signature under the formula "By the Court" is not conclusive that the order is a court order. Merriman v. McCormick Harvesting M. Co., 86 Wis. 142, 56 N. W. 743.

[d] Signing Record.—"The record of the proceedings of a court do not become orders, in the legal sense of that term, until they are signed by the judge, and when he signs the record the whole of that day's proceedings is thereby vitalized, and each order becomes operative at the same moment." Revill's Heirs v. Rodgers, 48 Cal. 197, "it appearing to me" does not prove that the order was not signed in open court, it being entitled in court and being under its seal.

[b] Disregarding Caption. — If an order made by a judge out of court is entitled as made by a court or vice versa, the caption may be disregarded and the order will be sustained. *Mojarrieta v. 2. Recitals.—In addition to the recital of the particular matters ordered or commanded,⁵⁶ some orders are required to recite the facts necessary to give jurisdiction to make the order in question,⁵⁷ and the grounds on which the motion was based.⁵⁸ It is sometimes required that the order specify all the papers used or read on the motion,⁵⁹ except scandalous matter which the court may strike out.⁶⁰ Preliminary and other formal objections taken upon the argument and ruled on by the court,⁶¹ and admissions or stipulations made, and consents given on the hearing of motions, if not reduced to writing⁶² should be incorporated in an order made on motion. A mere failure to employ the precise language of the statute in an order does not vitiate it, if it speaks the clear intent of the law in regard to the matter to which it relates.⁶⁴

F. SETTLEMENT AND RESETTLEMENT.—On the settlement of an order, where such is the practice, the parties may make suggestions as to the order to be entered, and the court may modify or add to the decision announced by him.⁶⁵

Resettlement.—For the purpose of inserting proper recitals omitted from the order, or of striking out improper recitals included therein, in some jurisdictions, a resettlement of the order,⁶⁶ may be had on a motion,⁶⁷ made on due notice.⁶⁸

G. FILING AND ENTRY.—1. Necessity for.—Orders of a judge or court generally must be filed and entered,⁶⁹ although some courts on its own motion;⁸³ but ordinarily the court will require notice of motion to be given to the parties interested,⁸⁴ which motion the court will determine without intervention of a jury.⁸⁵ The courts, however, are in conflict as to the evidence of the order which will authorize such an entry, some requiring some record evidence,⁸⁶ while others require only clear and convincing evidence.⁸⁷

3. Manner of Entering Orders.—Filing the order with the clerk is a sufficient entry.⁸⁸ A statute requiring a judge to enter an order is complied with where the clerk enters it,⁸⁹ and although statute requires the judge to sign the minutes at the close of the term, a failure to do so does not invalidate the orders.⁹⁰

J. EFFECT AND CONCLUSIVENESS. — 1. Generally. — Interlocutory orders, within the jurisdiction of a court, are binding authority so long as they remain in force as to all matters embraced therein.⁴

An order which is not void, but merely irregular, is binding until vacated or set aside;⁵ but a void order is without effect.⁶

2. Conclusiveness of Recitals. — Recitals in an order are presumptive evidence of their truth;⁷ but are not conclusive.⁸

3 Application of Doctrine of Res Judicata. — The doctrine of res judicata in its strict sense does not apply to interlocutory orders of a court or judge.⁹ But orders affecting substantial rights of the

[a] On the denial of a motion to set aside a judgment, a court cannot insert a clause in its order vacating an formal application and order of vacation is not always necessary.²³

Statutes sometimes provide that an order made out of court without notice may be vacated or modified without notice by the judge who made it,²⁴ or on motion after notice by the court or judge;²⁵ but no order made on notice shall be vacated or modified but by the court.²⁶ And it is sometimes provided that the court may on such terms as are just, after notice to the adverse party, relieve a party from an order taken against him through his mistake, inadvertence, surprise or excusable neglect on timely application.²⁷ An affidavit of merits is sometimes required.²⁸

(II.) Hearing and Determination. — The general rules regarding the hearing and decision of motions apply to motions to vacate and amend orders.²⁹ It is within the sound discretion of the court or judge hearing the motion whether or not an application to vacate or modify an order shall be granted.³⁰ But only such relief should be granted ex parte order extending the time of performance of the judgment. This order is not before the court. Adams v. Ash, 46 Hun 105, 11 N. Y. St. 618.

I. PROFERT.—Profert is the term applied to an allegation in a pleading that the pleader brings into court a written instrument.¹ The practice of making profert and allowing oyer has always been confined to the common-law courts.² Its purpose was to enable the court to inspect the instrument pleaded, and so that the adverse party, if he so desired, might crave oyer thereof.³

Profert has been abolished in England,⁴ and in most jurisdictions in the United States.⁵ But in the absence of a statute abolishing the

for, the pleading is fatally defective.⁹ But there is authority to the effect that a failure to make profert may be cured by an amendment;¹⁰ and, if profert was made of an instrument which it subsequently develops cannot be produced, the excuse for failure to produce it may be set up in the same manner.¹¹

II. OYER.—A. GENERALLY.—To crave oyer of an instrument originally meant to demand to have it read;¹² but, since the advent of written pleadings, it means that the party demands that a copy of the instrument be furnished him,¹³ or that the instrument be filed for his inspection.¹⁴ When profert was actually made in open court the practice was for the party craving oyer to demand to hear the deed read.¹⁵ That a complaint or declaration makes profert does not make the writing a part of the record unless oyer is demanded;¹⁶ and unless the party who would take advantage of it sets it out in the record.¹⁷

Oyer is not demandable of any instrument other than the one upon which the adverse party claims or justifies.¹⁸

St. Rep. 375, inspection had on an order of court to inspect. (2) Statutes have extended this rule to all instruments declared on, whether under seal or not. See the statutes and Lester v. People, 150 Ill. 408, 23 N. E. 387, 37 N. E. 1004, 41 Am. St. Rep. 375.

Profert of an instrument not under seal was unnecessary. See supra, I.

[c] Profert made of an instrument which is unnecessary does not entitle defendant to oyer. Atherton Mach. Co. v. Atwood-Morrison Co., 102 Fed. 949, 43 C. C. A. 72.

Oyer of record cannot be demanded.¹⁹

Demand of oyer must be made before the close of the term at which profert was made,²⁰ and before the party demanding it pleads further.²¹

B. PROCEEDINGS AFTER DEMAND OF OYER.—The demand of oyer is entered in the record;²² and the adverse party may counterplead thereto that a decision of the court may be had as to whether or not oyer is, in the instant case, demandable.²³ Where the defendant is entitled to oyer, and a proper demand is made, the court will stay further proceedings until it is complied with.²⁴

Under the ancient practice, oyer was had by reading the instrument aloud in open court.²⁵ But in modern practice a copy of the deed is given to the person demanding oyer before that party pleads and this is considered as oyer.²⁶

A variance between the declaration and the instrument sued upon is taken advantage of by a demurrer.²⁷

I. PLEADING OR PRESENTING PARDON AS DEFENSE. — A.

NECESSITY FOR. — A pardon, to be available as a defense, must be specially pleaded,¹ except where it is granted by the public act of the legislative department of the government,² or by a public proclamation of the executive,³ the courts taking judicial notice in such cases.⁴

B. MANNER OF. — It is generally sufficient to call the attention of the court to the fact that a pardon has been granted,⁵ the particular manner of doing so depending upon the stage of proceedings at which the defense of pardon is presented.⁶ If there are exceptions or con-

I. PROCEEDINGS TO DETERMINE CUSTODY OF CHILD. — A. IN GENERAL. — Unless deprived of the right to a minor child's custody by a valid decree of court, the parents are entitled to prosecute and defend suits in respect to such custody.¹

Form of Action. — The custody of minor children is usually determined in habeas corpus,² or divorce³ proceedings, but these remedies do not prevent resort to an ordinary action for that purpose.⁴

B. JURISDICTION.⁵ — Statutes exist in most of the states designating the particular courts empowered to award custody of children,⁶ as well as the residential and other jurisdictional requisites.⁷ Aside from stat-action by a child against its parents to enforce its right to maintenance may be entered with a reservation of power to modify it if warranted by changed conditions in the future.³³

B. TO RECOVER FOR NECESSARIES.³⁴—1. In General.—Statutes providing a remedy by which a parent may be compelled to support his minor child,³⁵ usually provide that an action for necessities furnished a minor child may be maintained against a parent,³⁶ or one who stands in loco parentis.³⁷

2. Pleading.—The declaration or complaint should set out facts showing that the supplies were necessities,³⁸ and an express or implied promise on the part of the defendant to pay for the same.³⁹ The fact of minority need not be disclosed where same is regarded as a matter of defense.⁴⁰

3. Trial.⁴¹—The parent's liability to pay for necessities supplied a minor child, when surrounded by dubious circumstances, such as a claim of the child's emancipation,⁴² or the necessity of the supplies furnished,⁴³ is a question for the jury.⁴⁴

C. TO CHARGE CHILD'S ESTATE.—The general rules which apply to any guardian, in relation to charging a ward's estate for its support, control a parent in the disposition of a child's estate.⁴⁵

III. PROSECUTIONS FOR ABANDONMENT OR NEGLECT TO SUPPORT CHILD.⁴⁶—A. IN GENERAL.—The abandonment of, or neglect to support, one's minor child, is sometimes made an offense, subjecting the delinquent to a criminal prosecution.⁴⁷

B. JURISDICTION AND VENUE.⁴⁸—The offense is triable in the juvenile,⁴⁹ the municipal,⁵⁰ or other court designated by the statute.⁵¹ It must be prosecuted in the state where the abandonment occurs,⁵² and in the place where the child lives at the time of or during the abandonment, not where the father was during the period complained of,⁵³ though under some statutes the venue of such offense is properly laid in the county where the father resides.⁵⁴ practice is irregular and will be followed only on a showing of very good reasons for doing so. Fla.—Fuller v. Fuller, 23 Fla. 236, 2 So. 426. N. Y. Matter of Kane, 2 Barb. Ch. 375; Smith v. Geortner, 40 How. Pr. 185. Va.—Evans v. Pearce, 15 Gratt. (56 Va.) 513, 78 Am. Dec. 635.

[b] Necessary Showing.—It is a father's duty to support his minor child, and therefore a petition to charge a child's estate for its maintenance should show the father's inability to do so, the nature of the estate and income derived from it, and the manner of living to which the child has been accustomed. Norton v. Sillocks, 4 Dem. Surr. (N. Y.) 145.

[c] The burden of proof is on the father to establish the necessity of charging the child's estate for its support. Bedford v. Bedford, 32 Ill. App. 455, affirmed, 136 Ill. 354, 26 N. E. 662.

46. As to actions to compel support, see supra, II.

47. See generally the statutes, and the cases cited infra, this section.

[a] Time for Commencing Prosecution.—Abandonment is generally regarded as a continuing offense and the laying of the indictment need not be within any stated period of time from the actual desertion. People v. Stanley, 33 Cal. App. 624, 166 Pac. 596.

[b] Conditions Precedent.—A criminal action against a father for failure to provide for an illegitimate child may, under some statutes, be commenced before his duty to so provide is established in a civil action. People v. Stanley, 33 Cal. App. 624, 166 Pac. 596.

C. INDICTMENT OR INFORMATION.—In accordance with the general rules controlling the drawing of an indictment or information,⁵⁵ the pleading should charge with sufficient certainty⁵⁶ every element of the offense,⁵⁷ such as the duty of the accused to support the child,⁵⁸ the name of the child,⁵⁹ and the facts concerning the abandonment.⁶⁰ The general rules as to negating defenses⁶¹ and following the language of the statute,⁶² apply.

IV. PROCEEDINGS TO COMPEL SUPPORT OF PARENT BY CHILD.⁶³—At common law, an action cannot be maintained against a child to compel it to provide care and support for its parent;⁶⁴ but statutes have changed the rule so as to permit an action for the parent's support,⁶⁵ at the instance of the county, township, or overseers

As to the necessity of an emanci-

parent for the services of a minor child follows in the main the general rules governing such pleadings.⁷⁵

C. TRIAL.⁷⁶—Emancipation of a minor child is generally a question of fact to be determined by the jury.⁷⁷

VII. ACTIONS FOR INJURIES TO CHILD AND LOSS OF SERVICES.—A. IN GENERAL.—For any injury to a child, an action may be brought either by the parent,⁷⁸ or by one in loco pated infant being represented by next friend, see 10 STANDARD PROC. 711.

75. See generally the titles "Declaration and Complaint;" "Pleading."

[a] In an action by a mother for the earnings of her minor child, her authority to sue, as that she is its guardian, supports it, and is entitled to its services, should appear from the complaint. Ala.—*Jones v. [a] The parent's consent (1) to the child's employment need not be alleged (Alabama Midland Ry. Co. v. McDonald, 112 Ala. 216, 20 So. 472); (2) but such consent, which is generally presumed, must be negatived when the service in which the injured child was engaged is prohibited by law. Hetzel v. Wasson Piston Ring Co., 89 N. J. L. 205, 98 Atl. 308.

[b] When the action is by the child's mother (1), the facts stated in the declaration should show the right to the child's services in herself instead of in the father. Citizens' St. R. Co. v. Willooby, 15 Ind. App. 312, 43 N. E. 1058; Louisville, E. & St. L. C. R. Co. v. Lohges, 6 Ind. App. 288, 33 N. E. 449; Goins v. Chicago, etc. R. Co., 47 Mo. App. 173. (2) It has been held that a direct averment by the mother is necessary. Matthews v.

Missouri Pac. R. Co., 26 Mo. App. 75; Geraghty v. New, 7 Misc. 30, 27 N. Y. Supp. 403.

[c] That the child was its parent's servant need not be alleged, nor is such an allegation proper. Buck v. People's St. Ry., etc. Co., 46 Mo. App. 555.

2. See generally the title "Answers;" "Pleas."

[a] A plea of contributory negligence (1) of the child without an averment of capacity is insufficient, when the facts alleged in the declaration make a prima facie showing of incapacity. Pratt Coal & Iron Co. v. Brawley, 83 Ala. 371, 3 So. 555, 3 Am. St. Rep. 751. (2) When contributory negligence of the parent, as well as

E. TRIAL.³—The usual rule obtains that where the evidence is conflicting, it is for the jury to determine issues as to the negligence of defendant;⁴ the proximate cause of the injury;⁵ the child's emancipation;⁶ contributory negligence of the parents;⁷ and of the child,⁸ or its immediate custodian.⁹

VIII. PROCEEDINGS FOR ENTICING AWAY OR HARBORING CHILD.¹⁰—A. CRIMINAL PROCEEDINGS.—The unlawful enticing away and harboring of a minor child against the will of its parents may be redressed, under the statutes of some states, by a criminal prosecution against the wrongdoer.¹¹

B. CIVIL REMEDIES.—1. In General.—A civil action¹² for dam-that of the child, is relied upon it must, as a general rule, be pleaded; it is not enough to plead merely the contributory negligence of the child. O'Malley v. St. Paul, M. & M. Ry. Co., 43 Minn. 289, 45 N. W. 440. As to pleading contributory negligence generally, see the title "Negligence."

[b] A plea of permission by the mother to do the act which, without fault on defendant's part, resulted in the injury to the child is bad, where the custody of the child rests primarily in the father, unless accompanied by an averment of authorization by the mother. Pierce v. Millay, 62 Ill. 133.

ages, based upon the loss of services,¹³ is also a proper remedy. The father,¹⁴ or the mother, when entitled to the child's services,¹⁵ or sometimes both,¹⁶ may bring the action, as may also one who stands in loco parentis.¹⁷

2. Form of Action.—The common law action for enticing or harboring a minor child against the will of its parents is usually trespass vi et armis;¹⁸ but trespass on the case is sometimes available.¹⁹

3. Pleading.—In an action of trespass on the case for enticing and harboring a minor child, the declaration should contain two counts, one for enticing and one for harboring.²⁰ It is essential to aver knowledge on the part of the defendant that the minor owed service to the plaintiff;²¹ that the plaintiff has been deprived of the child's services by the defendant's wrongful act;²² and, if the action

Where the proceeding is one for abrogation of the adoption, not revocation of the decree, the petition may be addressed to a court of concurrent jurisdiction.⁹³

(III.) At Whose Instance. — A court entering a decree of adoption may revoke it on its own motion,⁹⁴ or on an application by the child's natural parents,⁹⁵ or the adoptive parents,⁹⁶ or the latter's heirs or legal representative, on the ground of fraud.⁹⁷ But a proceeding to revoke by one who is barred by his own conduct will not be entertained.⁹⁸

(IV.) Grounds. — The grounds for setting aside or vacating an order or decree of adoption are usually specified in the statute.⁹⁹

(V.) Time for Filing Application. — An application to revoke a decree of adoption must be made with reasonable promptness.¹ If the ap-

I. DEFINITIONS AND DISTINCTIONS. — A. GENERALLY. — The term "parties" includes all persons who are directly interested in the subject matter in issue, who have a right to make a defense, control the proceedings, examine and cross-examine witnesses, and appeal from the judgment.¹ Generally the word "party" includes only those persons mentioned in the record as plaintiffs or defendants;² but the term is not always so limited.³ The plaintiff is he who, in a personal action, seeks a remedy in a court of justice for an injury to or a withholding of his rights.⁴ The defendant is that party against whom relief is sought in an action.⁵

Formal, necessary and indispensable parties are defined at appropriate places in this article.⁶

Strangers to the suit are persons who are neither parties nor possess the rights possessed by them.⁷

B. JOINDER OF PARTIES.—The term “joinder of parties” is to be distinguished from the term “joinder of causes of actions.”⁸

C. MISJOINDER AND DEFECT OF PARTIES.—A misjoinder of parties is the joinder of one or more persons, who are not concerned in an action,⁹ and who should not be joined.¹⁰ It is not the same as a misjoinder of causes of action;¹¹ and is not a defect of parties,¹² which means an absence of necessary parties.¹³

II. NECESSITY FOR PARTIES.—To the maintenance of an action, it is essential that there be parties plaintiff and defendant;¹⁴ a judgment without parties, however perfect in form, is void.¹⁵

III. RULES RELATING TO PARTIES GENERALLY.—A. EFFECT OF CODE ON RULES AS TO PARTIES.—The code has modified the extremely arbitrary and technical rules of the common law in respect to parties,¹⁶ substantially adopting the rules formerly prevailing in equity, and making them applicable to actions respecting legal as well as equitable rights.¹⁷

B. POSITION OF PARTIES AS PLAINTIFFS OR DEFENDANTS.—At law, persons jointly interested must stand on the same side of the case upon the record;¹⁸ and adverse parties should be on opposite sides of the case.¹⁹ But in equity, although it is proper and preferable to so secure relief that a party must appear on both sides of the record, he must resort to equity.²⁴

There is no presumption from the identity of the plaintiff's and defendant's name that they are the same person.²⁵

D. SAME PERSON AS PARTY IN DIFFERENT CAPACITIES. — A person may be a party in two different capacities under the same circumstances that two different persons might be joined,²⁶ but he cannot be joined in different capacities where the cause of action affecting him in each capacity is different.²⁷

IV. ALL PERSONS INTERESTED TO BE PARTIES IN EQUITY.

A. GENERAL RULE. — It is a fundamental rule in equity that all persons interested in a suit ought to be made parties thereto, either as plaintiffs or defendants, for the purpose of preventing further and unnecessary litigation and of doing complete justice.²⁸ The rule is often stated to be that all persons materially interested, either legally or beneficially, in the subject of the suit, however numerous, ought to be made parties either plaintiffs or defendants.²⁹ But this statement has been criticised as being too broad in some cases, which hold it to be more accurate to say persons interested in the object of the suit must be made parties.³⁰ While it is not always necessary to join all persons who have an interest in the subject matter of the suit, those who have an interest in the object sought to be obtained must be joined.³¹

Whatever statement of the rule be adopted, it must be remembered that the rule does not admit of any universal test, and is useful only as a practical guide.³² It is not founded on any general principle and is a rule chiefly of convenience and policy,³³ and subject to the discretion of the court.³⁴ The rule will not be rigidly enforced where its observance would be attended with great inconvenience and would answer no substantially beneficial purpose, and where the court can dispose of the merits of the case before it without prejudice to the rights or interests of other persons who are not parties.³⁵ Not being an inflexible rule, it is subject to some exceptions and qualifications.³⁶ However, if the persons materially interested can be made parties, the rule will generally be strictly enforced.³⁷

B. CONVERSE OF RULE.—The converse of the rule is equally true. No person need be made a party who has no interest, and against whom, if the cause be brought to a hearing, there cannot be a decree. Such persons are not even proper parties.³⁸ And it is a fatal objection to a bill that some of the complainants do not show any title, or participate in the relief sought.³⁹ There are exceptions to this rule also.⁴⁰

C. NATURE OF INTEREST REQUIRED.—The interest which makes a person a necessary party must be a material interest,⁴¹ that which authorizes the joinder of a party may be either legal or equitable,⁴² either direct and immediate,⁴³ or incidental or remote,⁴⁴ or consequential.⁴⁵ Persons whose interests are contingent and not inseparably connected with those of the parties before the court are not necessary or indispensable,⁴⁶ although they are proper⁴⁷ parties.

D. CLASSES OF PARTIES. — 1. Generally. — The general rule in equity as to making interested persons parties is subject to qualifications depending upon the classification of parties. Parties are generally divided into two classes, necessary and proper parties.⁴⁸ The federal courts divide parties in equity into three classes, indispensable, necessary, and formal parties;⁴⁹ and some state courts follow the federal classification.⁵⁰

2. General Chancery Practice. — a. *Necessary Parties.*⁵¹ — Those persons are necessary parties whose presence is necessary to a determination of the entire controversy,⁵² or who have a substantial interest in the subject matter of the suit, which will be materially affected by any decree that may be rendered,⁵³ or who have such an interest that the defendants already before the court may object to

A necessary party is one who has an interest in the controversy but whose interest is separable from those of the parties before the court, and will not be directly affected by a decree which does full and complete justice between them.⁶⁵ If possible and practicable such a person must be made a party.⁶⁶

[a] Justice Story says: "It is an important qualification ingrafted on this particular exception that persons who are out of the jurisdiction, and are ordinarily proper and necessary parties, can be dispensed with only when their interests will not be prejudiced by the decree, and when they are not indispensable to the just ascertainment of the merits of the case before the court. The doctrine ordinarily laid down on this point is, that when the persons who are out of the jurisdiction are merely passive objects of the judgment of the court, or their rights are merely incidental to those of the parties before the court, then, inasmuch as a complete decree may be obtained without them, they may be dispensed with. But if such absent persons are to be active in the performance or execution of the decree, or if they have rights wholly distinct from those of the other parties, or if the decree ought to be pursued against them, then the court cannot properly proceed to a determination of the whole cause without their being made parties." Story's Eq. Pl., §§81-83, quoted in Gray v. Larrimore, 4 Sawy. 638, 2 Abb. 542, 10 Fed. Cas. No. 5,721; Leyden v. Owen, 150 Mo. App. 102, 129 S. W. 984.

be proper parties need not be joined if their joinder would oust the jurisdiction of the court.⁷⁴

4. Where Plaintiff Waives Claim Against Persons Not Joined. A complainant may sometimes avoid the necessity of making particular persons parties by waiving all claim against them in his bill, where this can be done without prejudice to the rights of those made defendants.⁷⁵

5. Doctrine of Representation.—a. In General.—An exception to the rule requiring all interested persons to be made parties is known as the doctrine of representation.⁷⁶ A general statement of this doctrine is that where it appears that a particular party though not in the court in person, is so far represented by others that his interests receive actual and efficient protection, the decree will be held binding on him although not a party.⁷⁷ A familiar illustration of the doctrine of representation exists where the parties are very numerous and it is impracticable to join them.⁷⁸

b. Representation of Persons Having Future Interests in Real Property.—Another illustration of the doctrine is the case of representation of all persons having interests in real property subsequent to the first estate of inheritance. In such case it is generally sufficient, all parties having antecedent estates being made parties, to bring before the court the first person having an estate of inheritance,⁷⁹ unless his estate is defeasible by a shifting use, conditional limitation, or executory estate,²³ nor a race horse,²⁴ or an inanimate thing, such as a steamboat, hotel, toll gate,²⁵ has such legal entity as is necessary to bring an action. And the same is sometimes true of convicts.²⁶

A suit brought in the name of a person, who does not possess such a legal entity, is a nullity,²⁷ and should be dismissed.²⁸ There is no plaintiff and nothing to amend by; therefore it is not permissible to insert the name of a person possessing such entity.²⁹ But if by appropriate allegations in the body of a pleading it is disclosed that the plaintiffs are in fact persons or other legal entities of which the law will take cognizance, an objection that there is no party plaintiff to the action cannot be sustained,³⁰ and an amendment curing the defect in the caption is permissible.³¹ These cases, however, are to be distinguished from that where an action is brought in a name importing a corporation or partnership, and the petition does not disclose its

[a] In an action by a dead person, (1) an amendment substituting the administrator is not permissible. Brooks v. Boston & N. St. R. Co., 211 Mass. 277, 97 N. E. 760. (2) But if a person doing business in the name of a dead person, by mistake commences an action in the latter's name, he may substitute his own name. Heckemann

v. Young, 18 Abb. N. C. (N. Y.) 196.

(3) And if the nominal plaintiff is dead, some authorities allow his personal representatives to be substituted. See infra, XI, A, 3, a, (III).

[b] But in an action by a township not possessing a legal capacity to sue, when the defendant appears and tests its right to sue, the clerk of the township may be substituted. Township of West Bend v. Munch, 52 Iowa 132, 2 N. W. 1047.

30. Fruit-Cleaning Co. v. Fresno Home-Packing Co., 94 Fed. 845.

[a] A suit by an individual in an assumed or trade name meets the requirement that there must be a real plaintiff. If a person brings suit by such name he is afterwards estopped from disputing any judgment rendered on the ground there is no real plaintiff. The case where the trade name is merely the name of plaintiff's property is to be distinguished. Clark Bros. v. Wyche, 126 Ga. 24, 54 S. E. 909; Charles v. Valdosta Foundry & M. Co., 4 Ga. House); Omaha Furn. & Carpet Co. v. Meyer, 80 Neb. 769, 115 N. W. 310.

[a] Where an action is brought in a name which is used for convenience by a number of railroads as to certain business, but which has no legal existence, the railroad companies being the real party in interest may be sub-legal entity. In a case of this character, a judgment rendered without objection would be good, and on objection, the petition may be amended to disclose the entity of the plaintiff.³² And in an action by an association it has been held permissible to amend by making certain members parties suing on behalf of all.³³

2. States and Foreign Governments.—Sovereign states,³⁴ as well as independent foreign governments recognized as such by the United States,³⁵ are legal entities which may bring and maintain actions.

3. Cities and Counties.—The capacity of cities and counties to sue and be sued is elsewhere treated.³⁶

4. Boards.—Boards of commissioners are commonly made bodies corporate and politic by the statutes creating them, and as such they may bring actions.³⁷

of. — In order that a person may sustain the character of plaintiff, it is requisite that he have an interest either legal or equitable in the subject matter of the suit,³⁸ at the time of its commencement.³⁹ He must have a remedial interest.⁴⁰

2. Nature of. — a. In General. — The interest necessary to the maintenance of an action may be separate, or joint, or in common.⁴¹ If the interest is separate, then the action must be brought separately by each person interested;⁴² if joint, the interested persons must join.⁴³ If the interest is in common or if the question involved is one of common or general interest, one or more may sue for the benefit of all.⁴⁴

b. Pecuniary Interest. — As a general rule, the interest of a party to entitle him to a standing in a court must be a pecuniary interest.⁴⁵

c. Interest of Private Person in Public Wrongs. — A private person has not sufficient interest to authorize the institution of an action to redress a public wrong, unless he shows that he has sustained some damage which is special in character, not merely greater in amount.⁴⁶ party to bring an action that he have the legal title.⁷² The test has been held to be that so far as the defendant is concerned, an action is brought by the real party in interest where the plaintiff shows such a title that a judgment upon it satisfied by the defendant will protect him from future annoyance or loss, and where, as against the party suing, he may urge any defense he could make against the real owner.⁷³

In some jurisdictions, however, the mere holding of a legal title without any beneficial interest is insufficient to constitute one a real party in interest.⁷⁴

(D.) WHO IS A TRUSTEE OF AN EXPRESS TRUST.—(1.) Definition and Application.—The code gives an illustration of one class of trustees of express trusts,¹⁰ but it nowhere attempts to define the term itself.¹¹ The courts have inclined toward a liberal interpretation of the term to preserve the common law right of the legal owner to sue,¹² recognizing, however, that the term is sometimes used in a loose or popular sense.¹³

The trust must be express and not implied,¹⁴ but is not confined to trusts in land.¹⁵ If the trust relates to real property there must be some writing, deed or will,¹⁶ but no formal or written agreement is necessary to create a trust in money or personal estate.¹⁷ The trustee of an express trust is, of course, the person in whom is vested the trust estate.¹⁸ He must have the legal title to the property or thing sued on,¹⁹ and where possession is in controversy, the right of possession if any.²⁰

the benefit of others as trustee of an express trust.²¹

Contract for Benefit of Another.—The term includes all contracts in which one person acts in trust for or on behalf of another,²² and it is generally expressly so provided by the codes.²³ This provision embraces all cases in which a person in behalf of a third party enters into a written express contract with another, either in his individual name without description, or in his own name expressly in trust for or on behalf of, or for the benefit of another, by whatever form of expression such trust is declared. It includes not only a person with whom, but one in whose name a contract is made for the benefit of another.²⁴

(e.) Obligee of Bonds. — As to bonds given to a designated obligee for the benefit of persons who may be injured by a breach of its conditions, the obligee is a trustee of an express trust.⁴² And where a bond is executed for the payment of money to the obligee partly for his own use and partly for the use of another, the obligee may sue in his own name on his own behalf and as trustee for the other.⁴³

(f.) Public Officers, Auctioneers and Receivers. — An auctioneer who sells goods in his own name, having made the sale for the benefit of another,⁴⁴ and a receiver with power to collect debts of a firm,⁴⁵ are trustees of express trusts. But while public officers may be designated as trustees, directors, or agents, they are not in any legal sense trustees of an express trust.⁴⁶

(g.) Partners. — An ostensible partner is trustee of an express trust as to dormant partners.⁴⁷

(h.) Guardians. — A guardian is sometimes regarded as a trustee of an express trust.⁴⁸

(III.) Persons Expressly Authorized. — Another exception to the rule that actions must be brought by the real party in interest, exists in the case of persons expressly authorized by statute.⁴⁹ And if a statute which creates a right of action designates certain persons as the persons to sue, no others can bring the action.⁵⁰

5. Nominal and Use Plaintiffs.—a. At Common Law.—(I.) In General.—The rule of the common law requiring actions to be brought by the person holding the legal title suffered a relaxation, and the practice arose of bringing actions in the name of a legal or nominal plaintiff to the use of the equitable owner.⁵¹ But tort actions cannot be brought in the name of one person for the use of another; if so brought, the name of the usee will be treated as surplusage.⁵²

(II.) Right of Party To Sue for Use of Another.—The holder of a legal title may sue for the use of the person who has only an equitable title.⁵³ One having a right of action for breach of contract may sue for the use of any person he may designate to take the proceeds of the action.⁵⁴ There may be as many usees as there are persons interested.⁵⁵

(III.) Right To Use Name of Another as Nominal Plaintiff.—(A.) IN GENERAL.—The equitable owner of a right or chose in action is entitled by virtue of his ownership to bring an action in the name of the legal plaintiff for his own use.⁵⁶ The beneficial owner may certainly Insurer as real party in interest, see supra, V, C, 4, c, (III), (D).

[a] If there are several insurers, the action should be brought by the assured for the benefit of the insurers. Mobile Ins. Co. v. Columbia, etc. R. R. Co., 41 S. C. 408, 19 S. E. 858, 44 Am. St. Rep. 725.

[b] The jurisdiction of a federal court depends on the residence of the nominal party, not the use plaintiff. Irvine v. Lowry, 14 Pet. (U. S.) 293, 10 L. ed. 462. See generally the titles "Jurisdiction," and "United States Courts."

[c] On trial the use plaintiff need not show any right in himself, it being sufficient to prove the legal plaintiff's right to recover. Montgomery v. Cook, 6 Watts (Pa.) 238; Armstrong v. Lancaster, 5 Watts (Pa.) 68, 30 Am. Dec. 293; Mississippi C. R. R. Co. v. Southern R. R. Assn., 8 Phila. (Pa.) 107, 4 Brewst. 79. But compare Doe ex dem. Shanks v. Roe, 36 Ga. 432; Adams v. McDonald, 29 Ga. 571, holding that in ejectment a plaintiff in order to use the name of another must show some connection between his title and that of the legal plaintiff.

[a] The uses should be regarded as the real beneficiaries of the action when so doing would be essential to the assertion of any right or defense on the part of the defendant. Although the court in Wortsman v. Wade, 77 Ga. 651, 4 Am. St. Rep. 102, referred to the uses as "the real plaintiffs in the action" this merely meant that they should be so considered for the purpose of determining whether or not the suit should be removed to a federal court. Mathis v. Fordham, 114 Ga. 364, 368, 40 S. E. 324.

[b] Statutes declaratory of common law expressly provide that the use plaintiff must be considered as the sole party on the record. U. S.—*Webb v. Southern R. [c] Effect of Statute as to Costs. Since the passage of a statute providing that in case judgment is rendered against the plaintiff, costs must be taxed against the beneficiary, the nominal plaintiff is in reality not a party control of the proceedings.⁷² The nominal plaintiff has no right to interfere with the just rights of the use plaintiff;⁷³ he is not permitted to participate in the action either in person or by attorney;⁷⁴ and he has no control over the suit.⁷⁵

b. In Equity and Under the Codes.—The equity⁷⁶ and code⁷⁷ rules requiring actions to be prosecuted in the name of the real party in interest have superseded this common law rule allowing actions in the name of one for the use of another, although some traces of this rule still exist under the code.⁷⁸ is logically deducible from common-law principles is sometimes doubted, but however this may be, it is a useful rule in practice tending to simplify litigation and accomplishing in one action what two would be required to accomplish otherwise. *Ellis v. [d] In Pennsylvania (1), no one can maintain an action in his own name on a contract to which he is not a party with certain exceptions. These exceptions include contracts "where one person agrees with another to pay money to a third, or to deliver some valuable thing, and such third party is the only one interested in the payment or delivery; or where the promise to pay the debt of a third person rests upon the fact that money or property is placed in the hands of the promisor for that purpose; or where one buys out the stock of a tradesman and undertakes to take the place, fill the contracts, and pay the debts of the vendor." And also in the case where one receives money or property on the promise to pay or deliver to a third person, the third person is fairly said to be a party to the consideration. First Methodist Episcopal Church v. Isenberg, 246 Pa. 221, 92 Atl. 141; Sweeney v. Houston, 243 Pa. 542, 90 Atl. 347, L. R. A. 1915A, 779; Howes v. Scott, 224 Pa. 7, 73 Atl. 186; *Freeman v. Pennsylvania R. [a] Construction and Application.

(1) A statute providing that third persons for whose benefit a contract is expressly made is not confined in its application to a case of a sole beneficiary. Montgomery v. Dorn, 25 Cal. App. 663, 145 Pac. 148. (2) It has been held that this statute does not embrace gifts not perfected or other executory contracts lacking consideration. To come within the meaning and scope of the statute the executory contract must be one whereby the promisor undertakes to pay or discharge some debt or duty which the promisee owes to the third person,—in other words, the third person must sustain such a relation to the contracting party that a consideration may be deemed to have passed from him to the promisee which raises the implication of a promise from the promisor directly to himself. McDonald v. American Nat. Bank, 25 Mont. 456, 495, 65 Pac. 896, followed in Tatem v. Eglanol Min. Co., 45 Mont. 367, 123 Pac. 28. But compare Fry v. Ausman, 29 S. D. 30, 135 N. W. 708, Ann. Cas. 1914C, 842, 39 L. R. A. (N. S.) 150.

authorizing the promisee, as a trustee of an express trust, to sue without joining the beneficiary.⁹²

There are two classes of cases which may arise under contracts of this character, those where the contract is for the sole benefit of a third person or where he is the sole beneficiary,⁹³ and those where the promisee attempts to relieve himself of some obligation or duty.⁹⁴ The states which allow a recovery in the former class generally allow a recovery in the second class of cases; but in many states, the application of the rule is limited to the second class of cases.⁹⁵

(B.) ACTION BY SOLE BENEFICIARY. — Although the broad statement of the rule is undoubtedly not warranted by the facts in many cases in which it is announced,⁹⁶ it seems that generally the sole beneficiary of a contract between other parties may maintain an action⁹⁷ upon

(C.) NECESSITY FOR OBLIGATION OWING TO THIRD PERSON. — In order that the third person can maintain the action, it is sometimes required that there be some privity between the person to be benefited by the contract and the promisee, and some obligation or duty owing from the latter which would give the third person a legal or equitable claim to the benefit of the promise or an equivalent from him personally.⁹⁹

[a] Rule Stated.—To give a third party an action, there must be, first, an intent by the promisee to secure some benefit to the third party, and second, some privity between the promisee and the party to be benefited, and some obligation or duty owing from the former to the latter which would give him a legal or equitable claim to

There must be a relation of debtor and creditor between the promisee and the third person,¹ or such a relation that makes the performance of the promise at the instance of the third person a satisfaction of some legal or equitable duty to him from the promisee.² That it would benefit the third person to have the contract enforced,³ or that there is a moral obligation on the part of the promisee to the third person,⁴ is not sufficient to enable him to enforce the promise by action.

[a] Where one person receives a fund or property from another, and instead of paying him therefor he is allowed to retain the consideration under an agreement to pay the creditors of the other party; or when it is agreed between the parties to a contract, there being a valuable consideration therefor, that the promisor may discharge his debt to the promisee by paying it to some third person to whom the promisee owes some legal duty or obligation, the third person may maintain an action on the contract in his own name. But where there is no fund, debt, or obligation owing from the promisor, but only an executory contract to advance his own money to pay the debts of another not a party to the contract, the doctrine is not applicable as the promise is not for the direct benefit of the creditors. *Washburn v. (F.) WHERE FUNDS COME INTO HANDS OF PROMISOR FOR THIRD PERSON. If under a contract between two persons some property, fund, thing, or assets come into the promisor's hands or under his control which in equity belong to the third person, he may sue in his own name at law.¹⁰ The suit in this case is based upon the implied contract rather than the express promise, however,¹¹ and may therefore be maintained even in those states denying the right of a third person to sue on a contract for his benefit.¹²

[e] That a person suing as a corporation is not such has been held an allegation of legal incapacity to sue. Bank of Shasta v. Boyd, 99 Cal. 604, 34 Pac. 337. As to raising issue of in-the objection of want of legal capacity to sue to cases where the plaintiff does not possess a legal entity.²⁵ It is clear, however, that the term has no reference to a want of authority to bring an action,²⁶ or to a failure to show a right of action in the plaintiff.²⁷ And an objection that the plaintiff is not the real party in interest,²⁸ or that the cause of action had not accrued at the commencement of the action,²⁹ does not present a question as to want of legal capacity to sue.

VI. WHO MAY BE PARTIES DEFENDANT. — A. NECESSITY OF LEGAL ENTITY. — Except in actions in rem, in which an action may be brought against a thing,³⁰ it is a general rule that suits and actions must be brought against persons, either natural or artificial, that is individuals or corporations.³¹ In the absence of statute quasi-artificial persons, such as partnerships and associations, are not persons and cannot be sued as such.³² But statutes often authorize actions against corporation generally, see 5 STANDARD PROC. 645.

2. In equity all necessary and indispensable parties who are not complainants should and must be made defendants; and all formal and proper parties, who are not made complainants may be made defendants.³⁸

3. Under the Code. — The codes provide that any person may be made a defendant who has or claims an interest in the controversy adverse to the plaintiff, or who is a necessary party to the complete determination or settlement of the questions involved therein.³⁹ As in the case of plaintiffs,⁴⁰ actions may be brought against the real party in interest,⁴¹ the trustee of an express trust,⁴² or the executor or administrator,⁴³ or the person expressly authorized to sue,⁴⁴ without joining the person represented by him. It affords no ground for abatement that a person really or nominally interested is made defendant instead of suing as plaintiff.⁴⁵

Conversely one cannot be made a defendant who has no interest in the cause of action sued on and against whom no relief is sought.⁴⁶

4. In Suits Against States and Foreign Governments. — A sovereign state is immune from the jurisdiction of its own courts and cannot be made a defendant in an action without its consent.⁴⁷ Similarly courts decline to exercise their jurisdiction in actions against foreign

VIII. JOINDER OF PARTIES.⁷¹ — A. PLAINTIFFS.⁷² — 1. At Common Law. — a. Generally. — At common law all persons who are joined as plaintiffs shall have an interest in the whole of the recovery so that a judgment in solido can be rendered in favor of all.⁷³ A person who has no right or title to sue,⁷⁴ or who has transferred his entire interest,⁷⁵ cannot join as plaintiff with persons who have such right or title. If the legal interest in a cause of action residing in several persons is several, each must sue alone.⁷⁶ But if the interest is joint, no number less than all who are living can maintain an action founded upon it,⁷⁷ even though the others refuse to join as plaintiffs,⁷⁸ or may be without the state.⁷⁹ If the joint interest is severed, the remaining obligees may bring separate actions against him.⁸⁰

b. In Actions Ex Contractu. — In actions on contracts made with several persons, all, if living, must join if their legal interest is joint; but if their legal interest is several, each must sue separately even though the covenant is in terms joint.⁸¹

c. In Actions Ex Delicto. — In actions ex delicto, persons having joint interests must join,⁸² and those having a several interest and suffering a several damage must sue alone,⁸³ while persons having several

[a] Two persons cannot join in an action for injury to one only of them. Winans v. Denman, 2 N. J. L. 116.

[b] The interests of first and second mortgagees are distinct, and they must sue separately for injuries to their sev-interests, but suffering an entire joint damage, may join.⁸⁴ In determining whether there may be a joint action, the consequences of an act, not the act itself must be considered.⁸⁵

If the tort causes an injury to real or personal property owned jointly, all the owners, if living, must join in an action for damages.⁸⁶ Tenants in common may join in many personal actions, but in some they must join.⁸⁷ Persons having different estates in a property, such as a life tenant and remainderman, may join in an action for injury to the property.⁸⁸

d. In Real Actions. — At common law tenants in common must generally sever in real actions.⁸⁹

3. Under the Code. — a. In General. — The codes relax the strict rules of the common law as to joinder of parties, virtually adopting the equity practice as to joinder of parties,⁹⁶ so that as a general principle, persons who could not properly join under the equity practice cannot properly join as plaintiffs under the code.⁹⁷

b. Permissive Joinder. — The usual code provision is that all persons having an interest in the subject of the action, and in obtaining the relief demanded, may be joined as plaintiffs, except when otherwise provided.⁹⁸ An interest in two things is thus required, an absence of frequently resort to the equity practice.⁴⁵

The code has not changed the rule that persons only severally liable cannot be joined as defendants over their objection,⁴⁶ although it has made certain exceptions to it,⁴⁷ and courts in the interest of speedy and complete justice have sometimes relaxed the rule.⁴⁸ Nor has the code changed the common law rule as to joinder of joint tortfeasors.⁴⁹

C. IN LOUISIANA AND TEXAS.—Neither Louisiana,⁵⁰ nor Texas,⁵¹ have statutes regulating the question of joinder of parties, the propriety thereof resting in the discretion of the court, the aim being, within limits, to prevent a multiplicity of suits. held merely declaratory of the rule which prevails in equity generally. Except under the code which makes the rule applicable to both law and equity suits,⁵⁹ the rule allowing one or more to sue or defend on behalf of all applies only to suits in equity.⁶⁰ There are two distinct cases under the rule when one or more may sue for the benefit of all, as it exists under the equity and code practices,⁶¹ although it frequently happens that a particular cause will fall within both classes of cases.⁶² The test for determining whether one can sue on behalf of all is to determine whether all the persons represented have such an interest that they ought to be before the court.⁶³ Care must be taken that the persons on the record fairly represent the interest or right involved, so that it may be fairly tried.⁶⁴

Consent of Persons Represented. — In the absence of any showing to the contrary, it will be presumed that the parties in whose behalf the suit is brought consented to the bringing of the action.⁶⁵

Disposition of Representative Suit Improperly Brought. — If the suit is not one which may be brought by or against some for all,⁶⁶ it will be 38 Wis. 179), that one or more may sue or defend for the benefit of all. (3) Some codes provide that the court may make an order that the action may be prosecuted or defended for all in the cases considered; but the majority of the codes have no such provision. disposed of in the same manner as if the charges or allusions to others were stricken out.

B. WHERE ACTION INVOLVES QUESTION OF COMMON OR GENERAL INTEREST. — In the first class of cases in which one or more may sue or defend for all, it is the character of the interest which controls rather than the number of persons.⁶⁷ It is only required that there be present a question of common or general interest of many persons.⁶⁸ It is neither required, nor necessary to show that the parties are very numerous,⁶⁹ or that it would be impracticable to bring them all before the court.⁷⁰ The word "many" does not mean "numerous" or "multitudinous,"⁷¹ but "several."⁷² If the parties are united in interest they must join;⁷³ one or more cannot sue for all,⁷⁴ although it has been said that the statute extends to such cases as well.⁷⁵

Illustrations of actions in which questions of common or general interest to many persons are involved will be found in the cases cited in the notes.⁷⁶

[a] Thus questions of common or general interest to many persons are involved in (1) actions to enjoin a common nuisance (Greer v. Smith, 155 App. Div. 420, 140 N. Y. Supp. 43. Compare Linden Land Co. v. Milwaukee E. R. & L. Co., 107 Wis. 493, 507, 83 N. W. 851. See generally the title, "Municipal Corporations"), (3) actions to restrain the collection of or recover payments made under illegal taxes. Com. v. Scott, 112 Ky. 252, 65 S. W. 596, 55 L. R. A. 597; Whaley v. Com., 110 Ky. 154, 61 S. W. 35.

C. WHERE PARTIES ARE NUMEROUS. — 1. Joinder Must Be Impracticable. — The exception allowing some to sue or defend for all where the parties are numerous is based on the fact that the parties are so numerous that it is really impracticable to join them.⁷⁷ Some courts have attempted to draw a line as to the number which it is impracticable to join because of mere numerosity, but the holdings of the courts are not uniform.⁷⁸

2. Necessity of Common Interest. — The interests of the parties in a representative action where the parties are numerous may be separate and distinct;⁷⁹ but despite the fact that the rule does not expressly require a common interest, it will be found that the right to assert or protect which the suit is brought or the obligation which it is sought to enforce, is common to them all,⁸⁰ or as it has been stated, there always

[a] Mere numerosness (1) of itself is insufficient to bring a case within the rule (Carey v. Hoxey, 11 Ga. 645); (2) it will not be assumed that it is impracticable to bring in all the parties simply because they are numerous. Castle v. Madison, 113 Wis. 346, 356, 89 N. W. 156, where the number was 256.

[b] Various Numbers Considered.

(1) Hodges v. Nalty, 104 Wis. 464, 80 N. W. 726, holding seventy-five sufficient to justify suit in representative capacity. Compare Castle v. Madison, 113 Wis. 346, 356, 89 N. W. 156, holding that a representative suit where the interested persons number 256 is not permissible where there is no showing that it is impracticable to join them. (2) Without ruling on the question of impracticability of joining the interested parties, a representative suit was held properly brought where the interested parties numbered two hundred (Florence v. Helms, 136 Cal. 613, 69 Pac. 429), (3) six hundred (Small v. Attwood, 1 Younge [Eng.] 407), (4) and twenty-seven hundred. Van Brunt v. Ferguson, 163 Wis. 540, 158 N. W. 295. (5) But the mere fact that the interested parties number forty (Brainerd v. Bertram, 5 Abb. N. C. [N. Y.] 102; Bird v. Lanphear, 11 App. Div. 613, 42 N. Y. Supp. 623), (6) thirty-five (Kirk v. Young, 2 Abb. Pr. [N. Y.] 453), (7) and thirty-one (George v. Benjamin, 100 Wis. 622, 76 N. W. 619, 69 Am. St. Rep. 963) does not make it impracticable to join them.

est,⁹⁹ is immaterial, as they may be disregarded as unnecessary parties. If the sole complainant dies, or if the suit becomes abated by the death of the defendant, and the suit is not revived in a reasonable time, a person who is represented will be allowed to revive and continue the proceeding.¹

G. EFFECT OF DECREE. — The decree, in a representative suit, binds all the interests represented the same as if they were before the court,² unless they can show some ground for setting it aside which could be shown by an actual party.³ Equity rules sometimes require that the decree be without prejudice to the party standing in the same situation, but who is not named and who has not come into the suit.⁴

X. DESIGNATION AND DESCRIPTION OF PARTIES. — The names of the parties are generally required to be stated in the title of the action.⁵ And if a party sues or is sued in a representative or official capacity, the capacity in which he sues must be shown.⁶

c. Under the Code and Statutes.—The rules of the common law against amendments as to parties have been changed by the codes and statutes in nearly all jurisdictions,¹⁵ the latter generally providing that the court may in furtherance of justice and on such terms as may be proper allow a party to amend any pleading or proceeding by adding the name of any party.¹⁶ The code provision that any person may be made defendant who has an interest adverse to the plaintiff does not relate to the bringing in of additional defendants by order of court.¹⁷ Nor do statutes conferring the right to amend as to pleadings authorize amendments adding parties.¹⁸

becoming interested after the commencement of the action or suit,⁴⁰ such amendments are allowed in some jurisdictions,⁴¹ and sometimes provided for by express provision of statute.⁴² In equity, the plaintiff may add purchasers pendente lite as new parties defendant although they are not necessary parties.⁴³ And notwithstanding a statute relating to revivor, it has been held permissible to bring in by amendment the representative of a party who dies pending action.⁴⁴

(IV.) On Application of Defendant. — In the absence of statute, it is not permissible to amend, at the instance of the defendant, by adding new plaintiffs,⁴⁵ or defendants,⁴⁶ although it is permissible for the plaintiff to add them after objection by the defendant.⁴⁷ Under statutes, however, a defendant may cause one against whom he has a right of action to be made a party.⁴⁸ A similar rule prevails in some states even in the absence of express statute.⁴⁹

(V.) On Application of Person Not a Party.⁵⁰ — The court cannot, on the application of persons not parties to a suit, compel the plaintiff to join them as coplaintiffs,⁵¹ or defendants,⁵² unless a statute so provides, as it sometimes does where a third person has an interest in the subject of the action, or in real property, the title to which may be affected.⁵³

[c] Persons who have parted with their interests need not be brought in. Penn v. Hayward, 14 Ohio St. 302.

[d] "Controversy" (1) means dispute. Schenck v. Sterling Eng. & Const. Co., 151 Wis. 266, 138 N. W. 637. (2) It is "any controversy between the parties before it" and includes a controversy presented by cross-complaint, as well as that presented by original complaint. Alpers v. Bliss, 145 Cal. 565, 571, 79 Pac. 171. See 6 STANDARD PROC. 302. (3) It is determined by the pleadings of which the attachment proceedings constitute no part. Boston v. Wright, 3 Kan. 227.

Such statutes apply to cases where there are other persons not parties whose rights must be ascertained and settled before the rights of the parties can be determined;⁵⁶ but do not authorize the court to bring in a controversy between the defendant and strangers which is irrelevant to the action before it except for the purpose of making its determination of the action before it complete.⁵⁷ Parties entitled to litigate the same questions over again must be brought in.⁵⁸ A suit against one joint contractor is not within the rule because a judgment against one will not prejudice the other.⁵⁹

f. Proceedings on Amendment.—(I.) Generally.—Amendments as to parties must be made in accordance with general rules elsewhere discussed.⁶⁰

(II.) Bringing in Persons Necessary to Determination of Action.—(A.) GENERALLY.—Subject to the power of the court to determine the controversy before it without bringing in new parties when this can be done without prejudice to the rights of others or by saving their rights,⁶¹ it is the imperative duty of the court to order other persons brought in when it appears that a complete determination of a controversy cannot be had without their presence.⁶² This duty is not affected by the fail-

(B.) AT WHAT STAGE OF PROCEEDINGS.—The court must order persons necessary to the determination of the case to be brought in, if the necessity therefor appears at any time during the progress of the case.⁶⁶ As the appellate court has no authority to order in new parties, it will, where the equities justify it, remand the cause to the trial court to bring in necessary parties.⁶⁷

(C.) REVIEW OF ORDER. — The propriety of an order of court directing a person to be brought in cannot be reviewed on demurrer for misjoinder of parties;⁶⁸ but must be reviewed by appeal.⁶⁹

g. Effect of Unauthorized Amendment Made Without Objection. If an unauthorized amendment as to parties is made without objection, the suit may proceed in the name of the new parties, and a recovery had on proof of liability.⁷⁰

2. Striking Out Parties.⁷¹ — a. Generally. — At common law, in actions of assumpsit or on contracts, amendments by striking out the names of plaintiffs,⁷² or defendants,⁷³ were not allowable. But in tort actions, it is allowable to strike out a plaintiff who has no title to sue,⁷⁴ as well as a defendant.⁷⁵

In equity persons improperly joined may be stricken out by amendment.⁷⁶

The statutes and codes generally have changed the common law rules as to striking out parties.⁷⁷

b. Who May Be Stricken Out. — (I.) Generally. — When permissible at all, it is generally permissible to strike out either plaintiffs,⁷⁸ or defendants,⁷⁹ provided that the cause of action itself is not changed capacity, a substitution of the corporation cannot be had;¹⁵ but in an action against him in his official capacity, the corporation may be substituted.¹⁶

Consolidated corporations may be substituted for original corporation parties in a proper case.¹⁷

c. Substitution on Transfer of Interest Pending Suit.—On the transfer of the interest of a party pending suit, statutes allow the substitution of the transferee on proper application.¹⁸

4. Changing Capacity in Which Party Sues or Defends.—A party plaintiff may generally amend by changing the capacity in which he sues.¹⁹ So also, it is sometimes permissible to change by amendment the capacity in which a person is charged,²⁰ especially where the plaintiff intended to sue him in the particular capacity.²¹ But some cases deny the application of the rule and hold that such an amendment works an entire change of parties.²²

5. Transposing Parties From One Side to the Other.—If a court of equity deems it proper to do so, parties may be transferred from one side of a suit to the other.²³ Transposition of parties is also permissible under a statute authorizing amendments to strike out and add names of parties.²⁴ Accordingly a transposition of parties may be had to remove an impediment to the jurisdiction of a federal court,²⁵ or where one of several defendants acquires the interest of the plaintiff.²⁶ But a transposition will not be allowed at the mere caprice of the parties,²⁷ or to enable the party transposed to remove the cause into another and foreign jurisdiction.²⁸

B. BY CROSS-COMPLAINT OR CROSS-BILL.—New parties cannot be brought into a case by cross-complaint,²⁹ though they may sometimes be brought in by cross-bill.³⁰

C. BY SUPPLEMENTAL BILL OR LIBEL.—In equity,³¹ and in admiralty,³² new parties may be brought in by supplemental bill or libel, in accordance with general rules elsewhere discussed.

D. BY INTERPLEADER AND INTERVENTION.—New parties are sometimes brought into actions by interpleading them,³³ or by intervention.³⁴

[c] To What Actions Applicable.

(1) Although general in terms (see the code), (2) it has been held inapplicable to transfers of the interest of a party in replevin suits. Meyer v. Omaha Furn. & C. Co., 76 Neb. 405, 107 N. W. 767; Flanders v. Lyon, 51 Neb. 102, 70 N. W. 524. See generally the title "Replevin."

[d] Refers to Both Parties.—Walldorph v. Bortle, 4 How. Pr. (N. Y.) 358.

47. Dundee M. & T. Inv. Co. v. Hughes, 89 Fed. 182.

As to real party in interest generally, see supra, V, C, 4.

[a] So construed, the word "prosecuted" doubtless refers to the commencement and not to the continuance of the action after it has been properly commenced. French v. Edwards, 4 Sawy. 125, 9 Fed. Cas. No. 5,097. See Dundee M. & T. Inv. Co. v. Hughes, 89 Fed. 182. Compare Matthews v. Cantey, 48 S. C. 588, 26 S. E. 894.

49. Cal.—Anglo-Californian Bank v. Field, 146 Cal. 644, 654, 80 Pac. 1080; Sears v. Ackerman, 138 Cal. 583, 72 Pac. 171; Stuffbeem v. Adelsbach, 135 Cal. 221, 67 Pac. 140. Ia.—Kringlev.

ability, and had a right to commence the action.⁵⁰ But if the assignee is a necessary party to the complete determination of the action, he must be brought in by amendment.⁵¹ Whether there shall be a substitution is a matter left to the election of the transferee.⁵²

b. Where Transferor Dies or Becomes Insolvent.—Where the transferor dies after the transfer, the action cannot proceed in his name,⁵³ or in the name of his personal representatives;⁵⁴ the action should be revived in the name of the transferee.⁵⁵ But the appointment of a receiver for a corporation after the transfer does not dissolve it and necessitate a substitution of the transferee.⁵⁶

made pending the action,⁵⁷ and during the lifetime of the party.⁵⁸ Cases where one succeeds to the interest of another by reason of death or disability are not within the statute.⁵⁹ If, however, the transfer was made during the lifetime of the party, his subsequent death is immaterial so far as the right to substitution is concerned.⁶⁰

b. As to Character of.—The term "transfer of interest" means such a transfer as would enable the transferee to claim under the original party.⁶¹ In addition thereto, to authorize a substitution, the transfer must be absolute.⁶²

As affecting right to continue action in name of original party, see supra, XII, B, 2, b.

61. Matthews v. Cantey, 48 S. C. 588, 26 S. E. 894, transferee must derive his title or interest from or under the original party.

[a] This includes (1) a transfer of his interest by one joint plaintiff to the other (Gillespie v. St. Paul F. & M. Ins. Co., 168 Mo. App. 320, 153 S. W. 1079; Luebbering v. Oberkoetter, 1 Mo. App. 393), and (2) a transfer of a sole plaintiff's interest to one of the defendants. Bullion Min. Co. v. Croesus Gold & S. M. Co., 2 Nev. 168, 90 Am. Dec. 526; *National Bank v. 4. Proceedings. — a. In General. — After transferring his entire interest in a controversy, a party is only a nominal one;⁶³ if a plaintiff, he is no longer a real party in interest.⁶⁴ By his act he divested himself of the control of the action which vests in the transferee,⁶⁵ who must thereafter prosecute the action, either in the name of the original party, or, after substitution of himself, in his own name.⁶⁶

b. Continuing Action in Name of Original Party. — Even if no application is made therefor, the action will usually go on in the name of the original party as if no transfer had been made.⁶⁷ Under some codes, the transferor may require indemnity if the cause is continued in his name.⁶⁸

Control of Proceedings, etc. — Although the assignee will be recognized in all further proceedings in the cause,⁶⁹ it has been held that all notices in the cause must be served on the original party.⁷⁰ A judgment for the assignee is erroneous,⁷¹ and he cannot appeal in his own name.⁷² But a fraudulent judgment entered by the original parties prejudicial to the transferee will be set aside.⁷³

c. Substitution and Amendment. — (I.) When Substitution May Be Had. The provision authorizing substitution of transferees pending suit rely held the instrument sued on as collateral security, he may be substituted as a party on an absolute assignment to him. Springfield v. Weaver, 137 Mo. 650, 670, 37 S. W. 509, 39 S. W. 276; Howell v. Alma Milling Co., 36 Neb. 80, 54 N. W. 126, 38 Am. St. Rep. 694.

fers to every stage of the action,⁷⁴ and authorizes a substitution of parties in the trial court,⁷⁵ and according to some authorities in the appellate court,⁷⁶ although some cases hold that the provision has reference only to transfers of interest made before judgment.⁷⁷

A substitution may be had as often as a transfer is made.⁷⁸

plemental pleadings to carry the issue as to the transfer over to the trial.⁹¹

(V.) Rights of Parties After Substitution, and Necessity of Additional Pleadings.—The transferee, on substitution, takes up the prosecution or defense of the action at the point where the original party left off.⁹² The issues are those formed by the original parties;⁹³ no change in pleading is necessary according to some authorities.⁹⁴ It has been held, however, that if on the motion the adverse party raises the issue of assignment, the court may decide it, or it may order supplemental pleadings to carry the issue over to the trial.⁹⁵ If the court orders the substitution without changing the pleadings, the issue cannot be raised again on the hearing,⁹⁶ though according to some authorities, the defendant is not precluded thereby from denying the assignment.⁹⁷

Such a substitution does not release the sureties on bonds from liability.⁹⁸

d. Intervention.—According to some authorities, a transferee pendente lite of the interest of a party to an action may intervene in the action.⁹⁹

of a party may be corrected by an amendment made either at the instance of a party,² or by the court on its own motion,³ provided it merely corrects the name of the party to the action, and does not change the party or introduce a different one.⁴ The mere fact that there is another person who bears the name mistakenly used is immaterial.⁵ The right to amend depends upon the fact that actual service of the complaint and summons has been made upon the person intended to be sued as defendant,⁶ and that he was fairly apprised that the action was brought against him as the party intended to be affected.⁷

XIV. OBJECTIONS AND WAIVER. — A. ABSENCE OF LEGAL ENTITY. — 1. Of Plaintiff. — At common law, an objection that the plaintiff's disability is such that it cannot be removed at any time in the future may be pleaded either in abatement or in bar.⁹ Under the modern practice, the objection that an action is not brought by a real person possessing a legal entity cannot be reached by demurrer;¹⁰ but it may be raised by motion to dismiss in the lower court,¹¹ or by motion to dismiss the appeal.¹² If one of several plaintiffs has no legal or actual existence and no power to sue, defendant will be permitted to move to have him stricken out.¹³

That a quasi-artificial person brings an action as such, in the absence of a statute authorizing it, may be availed of by plea in abatement,¹⁴ although some cases hold that there is a defect of parties justifying the interposition of a demurrer.¹⁵

If an action is brought in the name of a fictitious person, the defendant may plead in abatement that there never was such a person in rerum naturae,¹⁶ or he may interpose a plea in bar.¹⁷

That the plaintiff died before commencement of the action¹⁸ may be

place of an initial letter (Mich.—Stever v. Brown, 119 Mich. 196, 77 N. W. 704. Minn.—Kenyon v. Semon, 43 Minn. 180, 45 N. W. 10. Neb.—Walgamood v. Randolph, 22 Neb. 493, 35 N. Savins, 44 Md. 410), (4) by striking out an initial letter (Wentworth v. Sawyer, 76 Me. 434), or (5) even by changing the surname of a party. Crafts v. Sikes, 4 Gray (Mass.) 194, 64 Am. Dec. 62, from "Crafts" to "Stark."

[a] Where a defendant is sued by a fictitious name (1), an amendment inserting his real name when it is discovered is permissible (Farris v. Merritt, 63 Cal. 118; Davis v. Jennings, 78 Neb. 462, 111 N. W. 128), but (2) a failure to make a formal amendment in this respect does not make the proceeding objectionable (Moore v. Lewis, 76 Mich. 300, 43 N. W. 11), or (3) subject to collateral attack. See 15 STANDARD PROC. 474, note 1.

pleaded in abatement or in bar, or it may be availed of by writ of error coram nobis.¹⁹

2. Of Defendant.—An objection that a defendant, a quasi artificial person, is sued as such in the absence of a statute authorizing it may be called to the attention of the court at any stage of the proceeding.²⁰ Where the defendant died before action brought, it has been held that a plea in abatement is proper.²¹

B. ABSENCE OF REMEDIAL INTEREST.—1. At Common Law.—An objection at common law that an action is brought by a person not holding the legal title need not be pleaded in abatement.²²

If the person claimed to be the real party in interest is not a natural person, the defendant must allege that it is a partnership or corporation and so a legal entity capable of suing.³⁷ A mere allegation that the plaintiff is not the real party in interest is not sufficient.³⁸ In addition thereto, the defendant must allege some substantial matter of defense against the real party which he cannot set up against the plaintiff.³⁹

c. Determination and Effect.—An issue presented by answer that the plaintiff is not the real party in interest can be disposed of only by the ordinary proceedings of a trial.⁴⁰ The determination that the plaintiff is not the real party in interest bars the action.⁴¹

C. WANT OF CAPACITY TO SUE.—1. *Objections Generally.*⁴²—At common law, a plea in abatement is the proper remedy to raise the objection of the absence of plaintiff's legal capacity to sue.⁴³ In equity and under the codes, however, the proper remedy is a demurrer, if the objection is apparent,⁴⁴ and an answer, if not so apparent.⁴⁵ plaintiff's capacity to sue. And it has been held that a default has the same effect.⁴⁸

2. Where Plaintiff Fails To Allege Filing of Certificate of Fictitious Name.—Where the plaintiff is a person, partnership or association doing business under a fictitious name, and the complaint does not show the names of those interested, an allegation of compliance with the statute as to the filing and publication of a certificate of doing business under a fictitious name is essential.⁴⁹ But where the name used shows the names of the partners interested, such an allegation is not required, and a demurrer for legal incapacity to sue will not lie if it is omitted.⁵⁰

D. MISNOMER.⁵¹—1. Objections Generally.—A misnomer of a party is not fatal to the jurisdiction of the court,⁵² and an objection on this ground must be taken specially.⁵³ At common law a misnomer of parties plaintiff,⁵⁴ or defendant,⁵⁵ must always be pleaded in abatement, whether the party is a corporation or natural person, or the objection is waived.⁵⁶ Under the codes, the objection should be presented by answer or affidavit in the nature of a plea in abatement, setting forth the misnomer and disclosing the true name;⁵⁷ and if the defendant takes issue on the merits,⁵⁸ or appears generally,⁵⁹ he waives the objection. Misnomer of parties is not a ground of demurrer,⁶⁰ or for vacation of the judgment;⁶¹ and it cannot be availed of by motion to dismiss,⁶² or by motion to quash service of summons.⁶³ Nor can the defendant plead in abatement that an alias dictus is subjoined to his name.⁶⁴ Statutes sometimes provide that no plea in abatement for a misnomer shall be allowed in any action.⁶⁵

in error.⁸⁶ If not so apparent, it will be available under the general issue;⁸⁷ and the plaintiff will be nonsuited,⁸⁸ or if the evidence is proper to be submitted to the jury, they will be instructed, that if the evidence is insufficient to establish a joint contract between the defendants, the verdict shall be for the defendants.⁸⁹

(II.) In Actions Ex Delicto. — In an action on a personal tort unconnected with contract and such that in point of fact and of law several persons might have jointly committed it, a joinder of more persons than are liable constitutes no objection to a partial recovery.⁹⁰ But when the tort is such that it cannot be committed by several persons, the declaration is demurrable, if too many persons are sued;⁹¹ and if a verdict is taken against all, the judgment may be arrested,⁹² or reversed on error.⁹³ The defect may be cured, by taking a verdict against one only,⁹⁴ or if several damages be assessed against each, by entering a nolle prosequi before judgment as to those misjoined.⁹⁵

An improper joinder of the personal representative of a deceased tortfeasor and the surviving wrongdoer may be objected to.⁹⁶

4. In equity a misjoinder of plaintiffs or defendants is a ground of demurrer if apparent on the face of the bill;⁹⁷ or if it is not so apparent, the objection may be taken by answer or plea.⁹⁸ Failing to object by demurrer or answer to a misjoinder of plaintiffs, the defendant waives the objection, if a decree can be made without prejudice to the rights of the parties.⁹⁹

As at law, all the parties who join must be entitled to recover; if one has no cause of action or interest in the suit, the misjoinder is fatal;¹ and on proper objection the bill will be dismissed.² And if the misjoinder prevents the court from giving appropriate relief, it will dismiss the bill on its own motion.³

If a person against whom no relief is sought is made a defendant, the bill may be dismissed as to him with costs;⁴ but it is not ground for dismissal of a suit against those properly sued.⁵

5. Under the Codes and Practice Acts.—Statutory provisions have so relaxed the common law rules as to misjoinder of plaintiffs and defendants,⁶ that under the modern practice, misjoinder of parties is not always fatal to the action.⁷ The general rule is that an objection on the ground of a misjoinder of parties plaintiff, or of parties plaintiff or defendant as some codes provide, must be taken advantage of by demurrer, if it is apparent on the face of the complaint;⁸ and if the misjoinder does not so appear, then by answer,⁹ or the objection

Determination. — If several persons join in a cause of action when their interests are several, and all the parties are before the court, they may be allowed to file separate petitions on their cause of action, and the defendant ruled to answer without other process.²³ But where there is a misjoinder of parties and of causes of action, unless one of the parties withdraws himself and his cause of action leaving only one plaintiff with a single cause of action or with several causes that may be joined, a demurrer should be sustained.²⁴

on trial, the objection may be urged under the general issue.³³

(II.) In Actions Ex Delicto.—A nonjoinder of parties plaintiff must be pleaded in abatement;³⁴ it cannot be taken advantage of on the trial, otherwise than in mitigation of damages.³⁵ The defense cannot be relied on in bar of the action,³⁶ nor raised by demurrer,³⁷ under the general issue,³⁸ or by motion in arrest of judgment.³⁹

If, in tort actions, such as replevin, where the right of action depends on title, the plaintiff alleges title wholly in himself, proof of title in more is a fatal variance.⁴⁰ Although a plea in abatement may be interposed,⁴¹ there is no necessity for it,⁴² as part ownership in another is a good plea in bar.⁴³

(III.) In Real Actions.⁴⁴—It has been held that the nonjoinder of parties plaintiff in real actions must be taken advantage of by plea in abatement.⁴⁵

b. Of Defendants.—(I.) In Actions Ex Contractu.—The rule at common law is that unless the joint liability appears from the plaintiff's own pleading, nonjoinder of parties defendant in actions on contract, whether on a specialty or not, must be pleaded in abatement,⁴⁶ or the objection is waived.⁴⁷ It cannot be taken advantage of afterwards by any other plea.⁴⁸ But if the objection is apparent on the face of the plaintiff's pleadings,⁴⁹ the defendant should not plead in abatement,⁵⁰ but should demur;⁵¹ or he may move in arrest of judgment,⁵² for a new trial,⁵³ or bring error.⁵⁴

(II.) In Actions Ex Delicto. — In actions for personal torts unconnected with contracts, the nonjoinder of a joint tortfeasor cannot generally be taken advantage of in any way, as the defendants are held to be liable jointly and severally.⁵⁵ The same is true as to nonjoinder in actions, the gist of which is a breach of a duty arising out of a relationship, such as a carrier and passenger and the like.⁵⁶ But in tort actions, the gist of which is a breach of a duty arising out of contract, the rules obtaining in actions of contract apply.⁵⁷ And in tort actions concerning real property, one tenant in common sued in trespass for anything respecting the land held in common may plead the tenancy in common in abatement.⁵⁸

c. Form of Plea in Abatement. — In consonance with the general rule, a plea in abatement on account of nonjoinder of parties should give the plaintiff a better writ.⁵⁹

b. When Objection Must Be Raised.—The nonjoinder of merely formal or proper parties is waived if not objected to before the hearing.⁶¹ But the nonjoinder of a necessary or indispensable party may be raised at any stage of the cause unless for cogent reasons, as it goes to the jurisdiction of the court.⁶² But when the objection is delayed until the hearing or later, it receives far less favor from the court, and its allowance depends to some extent upon sound discretion.⁶³

c. How Objection Is Raised.—(I.) By Demurrer.—In equity, the nonjoinder of necessary or proper parties may be raised by demurrer, if the defect is apparent on the face of the bill.⁶⁴ If the defendant demurs and answers at the same time, and it appears that all the necessary parties are before the court, the court may disregard the objection for want of parties and proceed to final decree.⁶⁵

d. Determination of Objection and Dismissal.—As a general rule, if the equity of the bill is with the plaintiff,⁷⁶ the court will not dismiss his bill on a successful objection for want of parties, however and whenever raised.⁷⁷ But the court will direct the cause to stand over so that the plaintiff may bring them in by proper amendment,⁷⁸ and will dismiss the bill if the plaintiff fails to make the necessary amendments.⁷⁹ A dismissal will be directed in other cases also.⁸⁰

Compare Hussey v. Dole, 24 Me. 20, if an order that the cause stand over is not made the bill will be dismissed.

[a] Whether raised (1) by demurrer (Ala.—Chapman v. Hamilton, 19 Ala. 121. Tenn.—Gray v. Hays, 7 Humph. 588. Tex.—Mott v. Ruenbuhl, 1 White & W. Civ. Cas., §599), or (2) answer (Van Epps v. Van Deusen, 4 Paige [N. Y.] 64, 25 Am. Dec. 516, if objection is made by answer or if the complainant neglects to amend, the chancellor in his discretion may permit the cause to stand over or dismiss it), or (3) made for the first time at the hearing (Van Epps v. Van Deusen, 4 Paige [N. Y.] 64, 25 Am. Dec. 516; Monroe v. Buchanan, 27 Tex. 241, 247), or (4) whether the objection is made by the court on its own motion. U. S.—Hoe v. But see Van Epps v. Van Deusen, 4 Paige (N. Y.) 64, 25 Am. Dec. 516, holding that it is a matter of course to dismiss the bill upon the allowance of a plea or demurrer unless the complainant takes issue on the plea or obtains leave to amend.

80. See infra, this note.

[a] Thus, (1) if the parties were omitted in bad faith (Wheeler v. Lack, 37 Ore. 238, 61 Pac. 849), or (2) if the plaintiff is chargeable with laches (Schwoerer v. Boylston Market Assn., 99 Mass. 285, 295). And (3) if it is impossible to supply the necessary parties and a decree cannot be made without prejudice to those not parties (Kendig v. Dean, 97 U. S. 423, 24 L. ed. 1061; Fourth Nat. Bank v. Carrollton Railroad, 11 Wall. [U. S.] 624, 20 L. ed. 82; Barney v. Baltimore, 6 Wall. [U. S.] 280, 18 L. ed. 825), or (4) if the bill would be dismissed even though the omitted parties were before the court (Oneida v. Allen, 137 Mich. 224, 100 N. W. 441; Wheeler v. Lack, 37 Ore. 238, 246, 61 Pac. 849), the bill will be dismissed.

Dismissal Without Prejudice. — A dismissal for want of parties must be made without prejudice.⁸¹

e. Cure of Defect. — Any defect in omitting to make a person a party is cured by his coming in and consenting to be treated as a party to the decree and to be bound by it.⁸²

4. Under the Code. — a. Generally. — Under the code, an objection on the ground of nonjoinder or defect of parties plaintiff or defendant must be raised by demurrer, if apparent on the face of the pleading;⁸³ and if it is not so apparent, then by answer;⁸⁴ otherwise the objection is waived,⁸⁵ unless the party omitted is an indispensable party, as

I. DEFINITION AND NATURE OF PROCEEDING.—Partition is the act or proceeding by which co-owners of property cause it to be either divided into as many shares as there are owners, according to their interests therein, or if that cannot be equitably done, to be sold for the best obtainable price and the proceeds distributed.¹ This article treats only of such proceedings at law or in equity; it excludes partition by act of the parties.

Nature of Proceeding.—At the common law, partition was both a legal and an equitable remedy.² But there is no substantial reason for designating the action under the code as exclusively either a legal or equitable proceeding.³ It is a "civil action" within the meaning of code provisions declaring that there shall be but one form of action to be called a civil action.⁴ But it does not necessarily follow that it is purely equitable in character.⁵ But under some statutes, the action for partition shall be by equitable proceedings.⁶

It has been held that a suit in partition is a proceeding in rem.⁷

II. TIME FOR COMMENCING PROCEEDING.⁸—Statutes sometimes prohibit the institution of a proceeding for partition before the expiration of the time within which the estate of a decedent should be settled.⁹ Even without such provisions, a proceeding before an estate has been settled, as to debts against it and legacies payable, or the time allowed for that purpose has expired, has been held premature.¹⁰ But in some jurisdictions, it is not reversible error that

W. 1023 (holding that proceeding under Nebraska statute is essentially one in rem); Smith v. Pratt, 13 Ohio 548; Pillsbury's Lessee v. Dugan's Admr., 9 Ohio 117, 34 Am. Dec. 427; Goudy's Lessee v. Shank, 8 Ohio 415; Glover's Lessee v. Ruffin, 6 Ohio 255, all holding that proceedings under Ohio statute are analogous to proceedings in rem. Compare Meyer v. Kuhn, 65 Fed. 705, 13 C. C. A. 298, holding that proceedings in partition are not strictly proceedings in rem, since they are not taken directly against property; but that they are regarded, so far as they affect property, as proceedings in rem sub modo.

[a] The Missouri statute (1) requires the court to be satisfied that the estate has been finally settled and all claims against it fully discharged, or that the property not already partitioned, is more than sufficient to pay all claims and demands against the estate. See Chapman v. Kullman, 191 Mo. 237, 89 S. W. 924; Robertson v. Brown, 187 Mo. 452, 86 S. W. 187, 106 Am. St. Rep. 485. (2) It does not provide that no partition can be had until the time limited for contesting the will has expired. Robertson v. Brown, 187 Mo. 452, 86 S. W. 187, 106 Am. St. Rep. 485. See also Spratt v. Lawson, 176 Mo. 175, 75 S. W. 642. (3) Nor does it operate to prevent a partition until after the administration upon the estate of one who has been absent for a great number of years and whose whereabouts is unknown, where it does not appear that there are any debts against such person or his estate. Chapman v. Kullman, 191 Mo. 237, 89 S. W. 924.

[b] In Nebraska, proceedings may be filed at any time after the expiration of the time for filing claims against the estate, although the estate has not been settled, and there has been no decree of distribution, provided the personal assets in the hands of the executor are sufficient to discharge the debts of the estate and the other statutory charges. Schick v. Whitecomb, 68 Neb. 784, 94 N. W. 1023.

[c] The Ohio statute permits the petition to be filed at any time, but the decree cannot be entered within one year from the date of death of a decedent. Schneider v. Cordesman, 10 Ohio Dec. 571, 8 Ohio N. P. 99; Fryman v. Fryman, 6 Ohio Cir. Dec. 377, 9 Ohio Cir. Ct. 91. Compare Smith v. Montag, 1 Ohio Dec. 224, 32 Wkly. L. Bul. 153.

10. See Ia.—Thomas v. Thomas, 73 Iowa 657, 35 N. W. 693, until debts of the estate have been ascertained. N. J.—Serena v. Moore, 69 N. J. Eq. 687, 60 Atl. 953, proceedings should be suspended until the amount required by the executors to pay legacies, etc., is ascertained. Compare Simpson v. Straughen (N. J. Eq.), 19 Atl. 667, holding partition at suit of creditor permissible. S. C.—Ex parte Worley, 49 S. C. 41, 26 S. E. 949, until expiration of one year from death.

See also Wachter v. Doerr, 210 Ill. 242, 71 N. E. 401, discussing holdings. But see Reifsnnyder's Estate, 214 Pa. 637, 63 Atl. 1075, holding that petition will not be dismissed merely because such proceedings are had and a decree entered before the expiration of the time allowed by law for final settlement of the estate,¹¹ though the practice is not approved.¹²

III. JURISDICTION AND VENUE.¹³ — A. JURISDICTION OF COURTS GENERALLY. — Partition in the early history of English jurisprudence was within the jurisdiction of the law courts,¹⁴ though equity courts at a very early date assumed concurrent jurisdiction over partition in cases of real estate.¹⁵ And when the writ of partition was abolished by statute in England,¹⁶ courts of equity were vested with exclusive jurisdiction.¹⁷

In this country the remedy of partition has generally been regulated more or less by statute,¹⁸ and the jurisdiction under statute has been in some states vested in courts of law,¹⁹ and in others in courts of equity,²⁰ and in still others the remedy may be pursued in either it was filed within one year of date of death of decedent, and explaining Keim's Estate, 201 Pa. 609, 51 Atl. 337, holding to contrary.

[a] A homestead, which is not liable for the debts of a deceased owner, may be partitioned prior to a settlement of his estate. Hild v. Hild, 129 Iowa 649, 106 N. W. 159, 113 Am. St. Rep. 500.

[b] A presumption that the estate has been settled exists when the suit for partition is begun after the time allowed by law for the settlement of the estate. Minear v. Hogg, 94 Iowa 641, 63 N. W. 444, distinguishing Thomas v. Thomas, 73 Iowa 657, 35 N. W. 693. See also Chapman v. Kullman, 191 Mo. 237, 245, 89 S. W. 924.

C. RETENTION OF JURISDICTION BY COURT FIRST ASSUMING SAME. When more than one court in a state has concurrent jurisdiction of the action, the one which first assumes jurisdiction acquires exclusive jurisdiction of the action.³² So also, when a court of chancery has possession of a case on some ground of equity jurisdiction wholly distinct from partition, the cause will be retained for that purpose.³³

D. TERRITORIAL JURISDICTION AND VENUE.—Generally speaking, courts of one state have no jurisdiction to partition lands lying in another state.³⁴

The venue in which the action must be brought is usually prescribed by statute.³⁵ The jurisdiction is usually restricted to lands within the county.³⁶ If the property is situated in different counties, the suit persons having no interest in the property should not be made parties.⁵⁴ In the case of strict partition, it is sufficient to make the present owner, or, in some cases the tenant for life of each share, a party.⁵⁵

2. Necessary and Proper Parties.—a. Generally.—Persons who claim under the same title are the only necessary parties.⁵⁶ Under some statutes all persons interested in the reversion or remainder are necessary parties in an action by life tenants;⁵⁷ but in some jurisdictions, reversioners or remaindermen are proper,⁵⁸ but not necessary parties.⁵⁹ A mortgagee is a necessary party,⁶⁰ as are also purchasers under executory contracts of sale of separate parcels,⁶¹ though there is authority to the effect that a lienholder need not be made a party;⁶²

but such persons are at least proper parties, though they may not be considered necessary parties.⁶³ One who is in possession and holds under a claim of adverse possession is not a proper party to a suit for partition.⁶⁴ However, in jurisdictions where the court in an action for partition may settle disputed rights or interests of the parties to the action, all persons claiming an interest whether adverse or not are proper parties.⁶⁵ A tenant, who has no interest in the fund sought to be partitioned, is neither a necessary,⁶⁶ nor a proper⁶⁷ party. Trustees and beneficiaries are proper parties.⁶⁸

When the state is a necessary party, and declines to consent to be made a party, partition cannot be had.⁶⁹

Disseizors should not be made parties to the action.⁷²

b. Grantees of Co-tenant.—If a conveyance made by a co-tenant divests him of all interest in the property, his grantee should be made a party.⁷³ The authorities are in conflict as to whether the grantee of a specific parcel by a co-tenant should be made a party.⁷⁴ Both grantor and grantee are necessary parties when there has been a conveyance in severalty of a part of lands, in the absence of a ratification by the other co-tenants or if the conveyance is not otherwise binding on them.⁷⁵

B. FORM AND SUFFICIENCY.—The form and contents of the process is usually prescribed by statute.⁵

C. SERVICE OF PROCESS⁶ in a partition suit may be made by any person authorized to serve process in a civil action.⁷ And unless otherwise prescribed by statute, it must be served in the same manner as process in civil actions generally.⁸ Service of process on a non-resident defendant out of the state may be made, when authorized by statute, in lieu of publication.⁹ But jurisdiction may be obtained by publication of process.¹⁰ Indeed, notice to unknown owners is usually given by publication.¹¹ The facts requiring publication are usually required to be stated by affidavit.¹² As in other actions in which service by publication is authorized, the statute must be strictly followed.¹³

Service Upon Minors or Incompetents.¹⁴ — There is authority to the effect that minors interested in land involved in a partition proceeding must be served personally with process,¹⁵ service on their guardians alone being insufficient.¹⁶ Service upon the guardian in addition to service upon the minor is sometimes required.¹⁷ The general guardian, where the minor has one, is the proper person to receive service, under some authorities.¹⁸ Indeed, such service has been held sufficient, without service upon the infant.¹⁹ And under some statutes, a general guardian may enter the appearance of his ward without service of process either on the ward or himself.²⁰ It is otherwise with a guardian ad litem.²¹

the present forms of procedure prevailing in most jurisdictions, pleadings in such suits are governed by the rules applicable generally to other actions.²³

B. BILL, PETITION OR COMPLAINT. — 1. Generally. — Ordinarily the rules as to what must be contained in plaintiff's pleading, whether it be termed a bill or complaint, are the same.²⁴ Statutory requirements as to what must be contained in the bill or complaint are mandatory.²⁵ Allegations of evidentiary facts may as a rule be disregarded.²⁶

Pleading Conditions Precedent. — Demand for partition prior to commencement of the action is unnecessary, and the making of a demand need not be alleged.²⁷ A co-tenant who has occupied the lands need not offer to pay for such use and occupation, although he asks for an allowance for improvements made by him.²⁸

2. Particular Averments. — a. As to Parties. — (I.) Generally. The bill or complaint in partition must name all the parties in interest;²⁹ and it must appear that those named as the parties to the action are all the necessary parties to a complete adjudication.³⁰

But see Traver v. Traver, 3 How. Pr. (N. Y.) 351, 1 Code Rep. 112, holding that a partition proceeding may be begun by petition.

24. Larkin v. Mann, 2 Paige (N. Y.) 27.

[a] There is no need for greater particularity of averment in a bill in equity for partition than in a petition therefor in the probate courts. Foster v. Ballentine, 126 Ala. 393, 28 So. 529.

b. Description of Property.—The property sought to be partitioned must be described.⁴⁰ But such a general description only is required as will lead to the identification of the property upon which the decree is intended to operate.⁴¹

c. Possession.—While if the complaint alleges ownership in fee, the further allegation of possession has been held unnecessary,⁴² in some jurisdictions, it is essential to allege possession of the property to be divided in common with the defendants.⁴³ In some jurisdictions, if it appears from the petition that the parties to the suit are the owners of the land, and nothing appears to the contrary, possession will be presumed.⁴⁴ If because of statute one not in possession may sue for partition, the special circumstances must be alleged.⁴⁵

d. Particular Mode of Partition.—While it is proper and perhaps advisable to ask for a particular mode of partition, there being more than one provided by statute,⁴⁶ and to that end to allege the facts upon which the plaintiff relies for the particular mode which he seeks,⁴⁷ yet this is not indispensable, and a complaint which is silent upon the subject is good.⁴⁸ A general allegation that the property cannot be divided by metes and bounds without prejudice is sufficient, without alleging the facts upon which plaintiff relies to obtain a particular mode of partition.⁴⁹ But where the statutes authorize a partition sale only when it is for the interest and advantage of the parties that the land should be sold, it must be so alleged in the bill or petition.⁵⁰

4. Signing and Verification.—Failure to sign a complaint or petition for partition, by the parties or their attorneys, though required by statute, is not a matter of substance, and will not avoid the judgment.⁵⁶ So an erroneous signing of the petition in a representative capacity is not a material defect.⁵⁷

Verification.—A complaint in partition need not be verified,⁵⁸ unless expressly required by statute.⁵⁹ It is obviated by statute in some jurisdictions.⁶⁰

6. Joinder of Causes of Action.—In some jurisdictions, a cause of action for the recovery of the realty may be joined with one asking for partition.⁶⁴ But some statutes prohibit the joinder of an action to recover personal property with an action to partition real estate.⁶⁵

C. PLEA OR ANSWER.—1. Generally.—In proceedings for partition, as in other actions, the defendant may plead anything which will abate the action or bar the partitioner's right to a judgment,⁶⁶ with this limitation that where the proceeding for partition is by an action at law, defendant cannot plead defenses purely equitable in their nature.⁶⁷ He may incorporate all matters of defense in his answer and is not required to plead same specially.⁶⁸ He may plead any fact showing plaintiff's want of title or interest in the land.⁶⁹ But a plea which does not negative or dispute plaintiff's claim⁷⁰ is in-plaint. Smith v. King, 81 Ind. 217. See also 8 STANDARD PROC. 806.

2. Pleas in Abatement.—This is the proper method of attacking the ability of the petitioner to bring the action,⁷² and of presenting the question that necessary parties have not been joined as defendants,⁷³ or that one who is joined is not a proper party.⁷⁴

Death of Party.—In most jurisdictions, the death of a party abates an action of partition until the proper parties are brought in;⁷⁵ but in others a plea in abatement because of the death of a co-tenant is not recognized.⁷⁶

The requisites and sufficiency of the plea is treated elsewhere in this work.⁷⁷

3. General Issue or Denial.—At common law the plea of non tenant insimul constituted the general issue to the writ of partition.⁷⁸ In most code states, a general denial now is permitted in lieu of the general issue.⁷⁹ An answer setting up an argumentative denial is

4. Setting Up Title in Defendant.⁸¹ — When defendant's title is not set out in the complaint, as when plaintiff alleges his want of knowledge thereof, the defendant in his answer must set out such title as he claims.⁸² When the facts alleged in the answer show that the defendant is a tenant in common with the plaintiff, the setting up of a title superior to plaintiff is bad.⁸³

5. Pleading Equities. — Failure of defendant to plead an equity in his favor will prevent its consideration in the partition suit.⁸⁴ In some jurisdictions such equities as a defendant has may be set up in the answer, a cross-bill being unnecessary;⁸⁵ but in others, a cross-bill or petition is necessary.⁸⁶ The equities though pleaded in the answer must be sufficiently specific to support a cross-bill or an original bill for like relief.⁸⁷

is unnecessary, the defendant being able to obtain relief by answer.⁹⁰ Such a pleading is necessary also when a defendant seeks affirmative relief,⁹¹ or if a defendant seeks relief against a co-defendant.⁹² When necessary to settle all questions of conflicting or controverted titles and the removal of clouds upon the realty, resort may be had to a cross-bill.⁹³ But such a pleading cannot be filed by plaintiff.⁹⁴

G. REPLICATION OR REPLY.—When necessary plaintiff may file a reply to the answer.³ In accordance with the general rule, if the reply purports to be a reply to the whole answer, and is but a partial reply, it is demurrable.⁴

H. SUPPLEMENTAL PLEADINGS.—Matters occurring since the commencement of the action of which a party desires to avail himself on the trial may be set up by supplemental pleading in accordance with the general rules.⁵

I. DEMURRERS AND OBJECTIONS TO PLEADINGS.—The rules applicable generally to the demurrer⁶ apply to a demurrer interposed in a partition suit.⁷ A demurrer may be interposed if an answer contains insufficient facts to constitute a defense, or contains any other defect generally demurrable.⁸

When special demurrers are permissible they may be filed in partition suits for the same reasons as in other actions.⁹

court of chancery will determine the legal title.³¹ That court will also determine the controversy when the dispute concerns the equitable title.³² When the property involved is personalty, the existence of an adverse claim or the hostile holding of the property is immaterial.³³

2. As Affected by Pleadings.—While an equitable defense to a bill for partition cannot be availed of unless it be set up by answer or cross-bill,³⁴ when both parties offer evidence and treat the matter as within the pleadings, it will be so considered upon the trial.³⁵ And when plaintiff alleges that no actual partition can be equitably made, which defendants deny, a material issue is presented which must be tried on the pleadings and the proof.³⁶

B. MODE OF TRIAL.—1. Generally.—When the suit is in chancery, the evidence is taken generally by a master in chancery or an examiner in the shape of depositions.³⁷ In some jurisdictions, the cause is usually heard by a referee or commissioner,³⁸ while in others the evidence is taken by a notary,³⁹ auditor,⁴⁰ or clerk.⁴¹ The court may try the issues in the event of a default, or when the answer does not controvert plaintiff's title.⁴²

2. Trial by Jury.—The right to trial by jury in partition suits is fully treated elsewhere in this work.⁴³

C. DISMISSAL.⁴⁴—1. Involuntary.—In accordance with general rules, if the complaint fails to state a cause of action, the action will be dismissed.⁴⁵ But the action will not be dismissed by reason of the force and effect of a defense set up in the answer.⁴⁶ A dismissal because of the filing of a disclaimer can only be had if the disclaimer be in absolute and unconditional terms.⁴⁷ That some of the parties interested in the lands had died since the beginning of the suit is no ground for its dismissal.⁴⁸ The action may be dismissed as to defendants who never were proper parties.⁴⁹

2. Voluntary Dismissal.—As a rule, plaintiff may dismiss a partition suit, as in other actions, at any time prior to the submission of the cause.⁵⁰

E. 9, holding that a voluntary nonsuit cannot be taken and the proceedings dismissed after joinder of issue, except by consent of all parties before the court.

[c] Too late after the finding of the court has been announced. Randles v. Randles, 63 Ind. 93; Succession of Platz, 122 La. 14, 47 So. 119.

D. FINDINGS OR VERDICT.⁵¹ — When the cause is tried by the court, the findings are the basis for the interlocutory judgment or decree, and hence all the issues must be disposed of.⁵² It is necessary only to find the ultimate facts, however.⁵³

When in a suit in equity for partition there arises an issue which must be tried at law, the verdict on that question is conclusive and not merely advisory.⁵⁴ When permitted by statute the verdict may be amended.⁵⁵

A general verdict includes a finding of every material and well pleaded fact.⁵⁶

IX. INTERLOCUTORY JUDGMENT OR DECREE. — A. NECESSITY FOR. — The making of an interlocutory judgment or decree authorizing the partition is indispensable.⁵⁷

B. SCOPE AND SUBSTANCE. — The interlocutory judgment or decree should determine the various interests in the property sought to be partitioned,⁵⁸ and dispose of all the issues presented by the pleadings,⁵⁹ and all other questions involving or relating to the title to property within the issues.⁶⁰ The determination of the court as to these matters must be incorporated therein,⁶¹ as must any provision for such incidental relief as may be granted by the court.⁶²

As a general rule the interlocutory judgment or decree can provide only that partition be made, and appoint commissioners or referees to make the same; it can neither partition the property, nor provide how it shall be made;⁶³ but in some jurisdictions the court may itself make partition without the aid of commissioners.⁶⁴ Statu-

B. ACCOUNTING.⁸⁰—A court of equity as incidental to decreeing partition may require an accounting and compel contribution, when such a claim for relief is properly presented.⁸¹ Thus, as incidental to partition, a cotenant will be required to account for the use and value of the joint estate beyond such tenant's individual interest therein,⁸² as well as any sum which may have been collected and

At common law the writ de partitione facienda issued to the sheriff, who acted with the aid of a jury, in making the partition.¹³ The proceedings in equity were largely the same except that commissioners were substituted for the jury.¹⁴ And now provision is generally made by statute for the appointment of commissioners or referees to make the partition.¹⁵ The interlocutory judgment or decree usually names the commissioners or referees.¹⁶ But any statutory method of appointment must be followed.¹⁷ New commissioners may be appointed when the occasion demands.¹⁸

The commission must contain the statutory directions as to the manner in which the commissioners shall perform their duties.¹⁹ Where the land is situate in separate districts, a separate writ must issue for each district.²⁰

The commissioners should take their oath of office before entering upon

There is no right of seniority in selection by the coparceners as to the allotment of particular parcels,³⁴ unless expressly provided for by statute.³⁵ When allotments of equal value cannot be made, a valuation of the several allotments by the commissioners is sometimes made, and those entitled to shares allowed to bid for the privilege of selecting allotments at the value fixed.³⁶

The allotment should be in the names of the original cotenants.³⁷ When a conveyance by metes and bounds of a part of the common land has been made by a coparcener, allotments should, if practicable, make such conveyance effective;³⁸ and in carrying out equity principles, commissioners will respect a previous voluntary partition.³⁹ When it can be done without injustice, the commissioners may allot to a cotenant a parcel contiguous to land already owned by him in severalty.⁴⁰ When the allotments are susceptible of an accurate description by reference to known public boundaries or government surveys, they may be so described.⁴¹

The interests of mortgagees should be protected in making the allotment.⁴²

Consideration of Value.—The commissioners must be guided by the comparative value of the land assigned and not exclusively by the quantity.⁴³ The payment of owelty for the purposes of equalization is elsewhere discussed.⁴⁴

Right To Create Easement or Servitude. — The commissioners may if necessary to a just division create an easement in or impose a servitude on the land apportioned to one of the distributees in favor of the share set apart to another one.⁴⁵

2. When Property Indivisible. — It was formerly a practice to assign to the parties the right to use and occupy the property for alternating periods of time when it was indivisible,⁴⁶ or to rent the property under the direction of a receiver and pay the rent over to the cotenants according to their respective rights;⁴⁷ but this practice has now become obsolete.⁴⁸ statutes, the commissioners to make partition must report as to whether or not actual partition can be made.⁶⁰

The deliberations of the commissioners should be had together,⁶¹ and all must be present when final action is taken and the report is made and signed.⁶²

When they make and file their report, their duties are ended, and they are functi officio, unless they act under a new order of court.⁶³

2. Objections and Confirmation.—a. Objections Generally.—In the absence of objections, a report will be held sufficient,⁶⁴ the report standing as a verdict until set aside for cause shown.⁶⁵

When the time for filing objections is fixed by statute, they cannot be filed after the time provided therefor.⁶⁶

The mode of taking objections to the report is sometimes to move to set aside or vacate the report.⁶⁷

b. Hearing on Objections.—A jury trial cannot be had on the objections to the report, though an issue of fact is presented.⁶⁸ The report will not as a rule be set aside if there is any evidence to sustain it.⁶⁹ It is otherwise if it appears that acts necessary to be done by commissioners or referees were not done.⁷⁰

When permitted by statute the court may set aside the report of referees appointed to make partition, and if necessary appoint new referees,⁷¹ or if the proceeding be in equity, the court may modify the report.⁷²

2. Who May Obtain Order.—When actual partition appears to be impossible, any co-owner is entitled to apply for an order of sale.⁸²

C. ORDER OF SALE.⁸³—The order of sale must recite the facts upon which the order is based.⁸⁴ It should contain the terms and conditions of the sale,⁸⁵ and describe the property to be sold.⁸⁶

D. NOTICE OF SALE, when required by statute, should be given in the manner provided for thereby.⁸⁷

E. THE SALE.—A partition sale is a judicial sale,⁸⁸ and the general rules applying to judicial sales and the proceedings thereunder are applicable.⁸⁹

[a] Notice of such proceedings must be given. Doremus v. Doremus, 66 Hun 111, 21 N. Y. Supp. 13, 49 N. Y. St. 800; O'Grady v. O'Grady, 55 Hun 40, 8 N. Y. Supp. 278, 28 N. Y. St. 903.

[a] In chancery the decree does not transfer or convey title even after the allotment of the respective shares of each of the parties. In this respect a decree is unlike the writ of partition at common law which in such cases operates on the title only by way of estoppel. In chancery this difficulty is remedied by a decree that the parties shall make the necessary conveyances to each other and they may be compelled to do so by attachment, imprisonment and other powers of the court over them in person. *Gay v. [a] In the distribution of such proceeds (1) it is necessary to ascertain the respective interests of the parties, and if questions of advancement arise that court has the authority to decide them. Matter of Landis' Estate, 2 Phila. (Pa.) 217. (2) A party who has succeeded to the claim of a distributee may appear and show his right to a distributive share. In re Coombs' Estate, 8 N. J. Eq. 78.

[b] An established claim may be to for the purpose of reviewing proceedings in partition.⁷⁶ But frequently the statutes limit the right to file such a bill, both as to persons and grounds.⁷⁷ The procedure applicable generally to bills of review are treated elsewhere in this work.⁷⁸

B. WRIT OF ERROR.⁷⁹ — In some jurisdictions, a writ of error is proper method of securing a review in a partition suit;⁸⁰ while in others, either writ of error or appeal will lie.⁸¹

C. CERTIORARI may be invoked when it is claimed that the court making the partition was without jurisdiction.⁸² Such remedy is also available when the commissioners to make partition acted in excess of their jurisdiction in setting off the lands.⁸³ The statutes sometimes permit a review by certiorari of partition proceedings in the orphan's court.⁸⁴

D. APPEAL.⁸⁵ — 1. Generally. — Following the general rule, no appeal will usually lie in partition proceedings, except from the final judgment or decree.⁸⁶ So in some jurisdictions, no appeal will lie

Orders entered after final judgment are, as a rule, appealable,⁹² unless it is an order carrying into effect a final judgment.⁹³

[a] Reason.—The purchaser at a partition sale "acquires an incipient right which may develop into a perfect right on confirmation or may be set at naught by a refusal to confirm, but the confirmation or refusal rests in the judgment of the trial court and no appeal from that judgment is given by statute. To allow the purchaser in such case an appeal from the refusal of the court to confirm the sale or from the order of the court setting the sale aside and ordering a resale, would, if he takes his appeal immediately and before the final judgment be rendered, result in hanging up the proceeding in partition pending the appeal, or if he be given the right to file his bill of exceptions and wait until final judgment and then take his appeal, he embarrasses the whole proceeding and discredits the title to be acquired at the

Parties. — The purchaser is a proper party to an appeal from the order confirming the sale.⁹⁶ When there are several defendants, and only one appeals, it is necessary in order to perfect the appeal, that notice must be given to all the other parties to the action.⁹⁷ When the appeal is from specific parts of the judgment, notice need only be given to those parties who are interested in those specific parts or whose rights are in anywise affected thereby.⁹⁸

3. Time for Taking. — The notice must be given within the time fixed by statute.⁹⁹ It cannot properly be given prior to the entry of the order or judgment appealed from.¹

4. Necessary Proceeding in Lower Court. — In accordance with the general rule, an objection or exception must be taken in the lower court in order that the question may be presented on appeal.² When the ruling of the court is adverse, it is necessary to save the exception by a bill of exceptions.³

5. Effect of Proceedings. — When an appeal is allowed from an resale. The general assembly has not given such a right; it has wisely withheld a power that could be used to cloud a title and embarrass judicial proceedings." Thomas v. Elliott, 215 Mo. 598, 114 S. W. 987.

interlocutory order or judgment, the effect is to oust the lower court of jurisdiction to proceed further until the appeal is disposed of.⁴ If the order or judgment is not appealable, proceedings will not be stayed.⁵ When an appeal is taken from a judgment for costs or when the relief granted is enforceable by fieri facias, security is usually required to stay proceedings for enforcement of the judgment.⁶

6. Judgment on Appeal. — When the court finds the partition as made is unequal, the judgment must be reversed, as the appellate court cannot render a judgment equalizing the allotments or imposing a charge in favor of one allotment and against another.⁷ In some instances, it will instruct the commissioners or the court below as to their mode of proceeding.⁸ An error in imposing or refusing to impose a charge upon a parcel of land may be corrected by modifying the decree, without reversing the judgment.⁹ So also, a clerical mistake in the description of the land, disclosed by the judgment itself, may be reformed by the appellate court without reversing the judgment.¹⁰ When the judgment must be reversed as to one of the parties, it is generally necessary that a reversal as to all be directed.¹¹
